MONEY FOR THE OREGON INDIANS—BOOKS AND PUBLIC DOCUMENTS—INVALID PENSIONERS, ETC.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 20.

The Secretary of the Interior will transmit by the Pacific steamer of the 5th August, $264,000 to Oregon and Washington, to satisfy the recently audited claims on account of advances for restoring and maintaining peaceable and more friendly relations with the Indian tribes.

Judge GILLIS, of Pennsylvania, has been appointed special agent to the Pawnees, with the view so to arrange matters as to prevent future difficulties.

Books and public documents, pertaining to the first session of the late Congress, are being boxed to be sent to the various literary institutions throughout the country, in accordance with law. This is one of the reforms which has deprived members from selling such works, as was formerly practiced, for waste paper or at nominal sums to speculating book-traders.

A novel commitment has been made to the District Columbia Penitentiary in the shape of an Indian who has been found guilty of horse stealing. He was immediately set at work.

The Commissioner of Pensions has issued a circular, in which he directs the invalid pensioners of the Army and Navy, who are subject to biennial examinations, to present, with their usual vouchers, on the 4th of September and 1st of January next, respectively, the certificate as to the state of their disability. The operation of the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1859, virtually suspends the semi-annual payments of invalid pensions at the commencement of each biennial period, until the certificate of two physicians or surgeons has been presented.

Commencement at Harvard College.

BOSTON, Wednesday, July 20.

The customary Commencement exercises at Harvard College took place to-day. The Governor, Executive Council and members of the Board of Overseers proceeded to Cambridge under escort of the Lancers. The Collegiate exercises took place in the Church of the First Parish. The assembly present was unusually large. EDWARD EVERETT, Prof. SPARKS, Judge WHITE, of Salem, and other prominent persons, occupied seats on the platform with President WALKER. The programme of exercises by the Graduating Class was carried out, and gave general satisfaction. For the new term there were 140 applicants, of whom 120 were admitted. At the meeting of the Alumni a letter was received from R. C. WINTHROP, declining a reelection, but the Association re-elected him with the whole of last year's Board of Officers. On motion of CHAS. E. NORTON, a Committee was appointed to procure a marble statue of JOSIAH QUINCY to be made by WM. W. STORY, who graduated while Mr. Quincy was President of the College. A Committee of two members of each class under Mr. QUINCY, and of thirteen other gentlemen of distinction, was appointed to procure subscriptions for the statue. The degrees of LL. D. were conferred on CHAS. SUMNER and GEO. B. EMERSON, of Boston; HENRY W. LONGFELLOW, of Cambridge; and GEO. P. MARSH, of Burlington, Vt.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, July 20.

In the case of Horace H. Day et al. vs. Stellman et al., which lately occupied the Court here for two weeks, his Honor Judge GILES, this morning rendered, at the close of a very able opinion, a decision in favor of MR. DAY on all the points presented, holding that under his agreements with GOODYEAR, Mr. DAY has an exclusive monopoly of elastic goods containing vulcanized rubber. A perpetual injunction was granted. Some fifteen other suits were depending here upon this decision, in all of which perpetual injunctions will issue.

The Canadian Government, etc.

TORONTO, Wednesday, July 20.

The different departments of our Government are making active preparations for their removal to Quebec. A portion have already gone, and others are about leaving.

Samples of the new Wheat are now coming in from various parts of Canada West, indicating an abundan crop and excellent quality. The weather is very favorable for the growing crops.

The Pittsburgh Post and President Buchanan.

PITTSBURGH, Tuesday, July 19.

The Pittsburgh Post, the leading Democratic organ in Western Pennsylvania, this morning puts up the name of JAMES BUCHANAN for reelection, and in a strong and unequivocal leader, takes the ground that he is the only candidate who can be nominated by the Charleston Convention to reconcile the differences which exist in the Democratic ranks at the North and South.

From Pike's Peak.

LEAVENWORTH, Tuesday, July 19.

An express arrived from Denver City this evening and reports everything in the mining region to be in a flourishing condition. The express brought no papers and hence there are no details of the news. Another express is due to-morrow.

LEAVENWORTH, Wednesday, July 20.

Another express from Denver City, 14th inst., arrived this afternoon, bringing $2,500 in treasure.

Two Negroes Hung and One Burnt at the Stake.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, July 20.

A dispatch received to-day from Marshall, in this State, states that three negroes, who were on trial yesterday at that place for rape and murder, were at night taken forcibly from the jail by a mob, and two of them hung and the other burnt at the stake.

Death of Judge Nash.

PETERSBURGH, Va., Wednesday, July 20.

Suicide at Toronto.

TORONTO, C. W., Wednesday, July 20.

WM. B. CREW, a well-known auctioneer, committed suicide to-day in consequence of business difficulties.

Non-Arrival of the Africa.

SANDY HOOK, Wednesday, July 20—1½ P. M.

There are yet no signs of the R. M. steamship Africa, now in her 12th day from Liverpool, and fully due. Wind northwest, fresh. Weather cloudy.

Southern Ocean Steamer Movements.

SAVANNAH, Wednesday, July 20.

TRAVEL ON THE PLAINS—THE BUSINESS OF AN OUTFITTING STATION.—A correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, writing from Westport, Ill., gives a statistical account of the business done in that border town, in fitting-out parties about to cross the Plains. The writer says:

"Our streets are at this time more quiet and dull than I have ever seen them. The Spring trade with the Mexicans and mountaineers being over, the merchant trains having all departed, and the last hunter, peon and greaser, having left for their distant lairs and ranches. But we can spare them for a while in consideration of the unusual amount of money they this season left with our merchants and manufacturers, without going into anything like a review of the business of this little border town for the closing season, I will merely say that the sales of one Western house, from the 1st of January to the 1st of July, has amounted to $141,800—chiefly from parties from across the Plains.

The number of freight trains outfitted in Westport during the present season has been 17.

Number of merchant trains outfitted in Westport, and bought goods at the East, 30.

Whole number of trains outfitted here, 144. Some trains comprised only 6 wagons, and others had as many as 18. Supposing 12 to be a fair average, the number of wagons would amount to 1,728.

All the trade in New-Mexico, or nearly all, comes first to Westport, and is from thence distributed. All the New-Mexican merchants make this their Eastern head-quarters, and have here their agents, freighters, and correspondents. To this point they consign their goods and forward their drafts. In the Spring they all come here, and many of them go no further East to purchase their supplies. The larger houses, it is true, go to St. Louis, New-York, and Philadelphia to purchase the bulk of their supplies and negotiate their commodities, but even they, as largely as they purchase, find it to their interest to buy certain description of articles at Westport.

☞The Lecompte filly, Pretty-by-Night, the last of the famous Lecompte stock remaining in Kentucky, was sold a few days since for $1,000. She is two years old.

FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

News from California, Oregon and British Columbia.

By the arrival of the Overland Mail, we have received dates from California to June 27, six days later than steamer advices, and corresponding news from all points on the Pacific. A brief telegraphic summary of this intelligence has already been published.

The news from California is interesting, politically. The Buchanan wing of the Democracy held a State Convention at Sacramento, June 23. GOV. WELLER was defeated in the nomination for Governor by MILTON S. LATHAM. We find the following summary of the proceedings in the San Francisco papers:

"Major R. P. Hammond, of San Joaquin, was elected permanent President of the Convention, with six Vice-Presidents, including W. R. Garrison, Esq., of San Francisco. On the first ballot for Governor, Mr. Latham received 129 votes; Weller, 111; Nugent, 29. On the second ballot the vote was: Latham, 135; Weller, 104; Nugent, 29. Denver and Dudley withdrew. On motion of Col. J. P. Hoge, of San Francisco, the nomination of Mr. Latham was declared unanimous. John G. Downey, of Los Angeles, received the nomination for Lieutenant-Governor by acclamation."

Disturbances had occurred at Fort Tejon, of which the following account is given:

"On Friday, June 17, a note was received from the Reserve by an express, stating that a difficulty had occurred among the Indians, and, as the result, two Indian women were killed and one man wounded. Being unable to get any satisfactory information from the messenger—an Indian—the matter was laid before Col. BEALL, commanding this post, who immediately dispatched Capt. DAVIDSON and Lieut. CHAPMAN, with a detachment of Company B, First Dragoons, to the Reserve. On their arrival they ascertained that an Indian called TOMAS, (who some days previous had become incensed at his wife and daughter for assisting to harvest the grain, and at the same time uttered threats of violence, for which he was confined, but was released on promise of good behavior,) while the employes were at dinner, and most of the harvesters were at their camps, proceeded to where his wife and daughter were and inflicted several wounds with a butcher-knife on the person of the girl, which produced death in a few minutes. The culprit was, after some resistance, secured. The friends of the woman insisted upon executing summary vengeance, but were deterred until the arrival of the detachment, at which time they were assembling in large numbers with the avowed intention of forcing the prison and killing him. They were, however, ordered to disperse. It was feared that if the order party were successful in punishing the prisoner, his friends—by the way, are of the most warlike tribe on the Reserve—would attempt to take revenge for the act. To provide against this, Col. D. bivouacked with his men near the prison. No further difficulty occurred, although quite a body of the natives assembled a little past midnight near the prison, for the purpose, if possible, of getting the prisoner; but, on being assured that the guard would repel all attempts, they quietly dispersed. At daylight the culprit, in charge of the detachment, started for Fort Tejon, where he will be delivered over to the civil authorities."

The Los Angeles Vineyard, June 24, has the following item:

"From an extra of the Santa Barbara Gazette, we learn that, on Friday, June 24, the heat was so intense in that place as to cause the death of 'calves, rabbits, birds, &c.' All the trees were blasted, and the fruit roasted. Metal of all kinds became so hot that it could not be touched with the naked hand. The good people of Santa Barbara suppose that a volcanic eruption has taken place in their vicinity."

A San Francisco paper tells this curious story:

"The steamer Goliah has been chartered and prepared for a novel purpose. In the ocean, about thirty miles from Santa Barbara, there is an island called Santa Rosa, upon which there are about twenty thousand head of cattle and sheep. These are the increase of a few head which were placed on the Island some twenty years ago. The original owners gave a mortgage upon this stock, which was lately foreclosed, and the present owners propose removing the animals to the main land, and have chartered this vessel to convey them. It is supposed that it will require four or five months to complete the job. The vessel will start within a day or two."

The Humboldt Times contains an account of a new gold discovery. It says:

"Our town was thrown into a great uproar on Monday last, by the arrival of Mr. C. A. ROBINSON, who lives at the mouth of Eel River, and has resided in this county for eight years, with the news that he had discovered extensive gold diggings, somewhere in the south part of the county. He exhibited a prospect which he stated he procured from one pan of dirt. The prospect amounted to ten or fifteen cents.

OREGON.

Oregon dates are to June 16. A flood had occurred in the Columbia River, causing great destruction o property. Upon the Oregon side of the Cascades, the water caused the destruction of much valuable property. The fine Railroad bridge, constructed within the year for RUCKEL & OLMSTED, at a cost of $10,000, is entirely swept away. About 300 feet of their portage railway is destroyed, and much other serious damage done. On the Washington side, the railway was momentarily threatened with a similar disaster when the steamer left. The water was above the highest stage reached in 1853, and was constantly and rapidly rising.

Father DE SMET, the celebrated Indian missionary, had again visited Portland, accompanied by the chiefs of the more formidable Indian tribes, who had journeyed from the far interior with him. The trip was taken at the invitation of Mr. GRAY, Indian Superintendent, in order that the chiefs might behold the strength and superior advancement of our people, and that they might report the same to their tribes on return. When they returned to their tribes, Father DE SMET would pursue his way eastward, across the plains, to St. Louis, visiting and counseling the various tribes on his way.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Dates from Washington Territory are to June 10. Political excitement was running high. GOV. STEVENS and Col. WALLACE, his competitor, are canvassing together. The impression is that STEVENS will be reelected Delegate to Congress by a large majority. It is also confidently believed that the county elections will almost universally result favorably to the Democracy.

Three canoes full of Indians had made an attack upon Blunt's or Smith's Island light-house. Major HALLER had dispatched a force of twenty soldiers to drive away the Indians, but before they could arrive at the scene of action, a volunteer force of fifteen men under Capt. JONAS made their appearance. On perceiving the strength of the party opposed to them the Indians withdrew.

For the three days ending May 27, 736 000 feet of lumber were shipped from Port Gambia to San Francisco.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Dates from Victoria to June 21 announce a disastrous overflow of Frazer's River. The stream had risen twelve feet in four days at Fort Yale. All the houses on the beach were overflowed, and several had been swept away.

Mining operations were entirely suspended on the river, in consequence of the high water.

Ten pounds of powder exploded in the magazine of the steamer Forwood as she entered the harbor of Esquimalt on the 18th June, and Mr. LOCK, a son of the Captain, and GRAY, a servant, were horribly wounded. The latter died the same night. The explosion was caused by the igniting of a matchbox.

Coal had been discovered near Queensborough.

Governor DOUGLASS and Colonel MOODY had made a trip to the north entrance of Fraser's River, and found fine tracts of land.

The employes at Queensborough were all lying idle. Nothing had been done towards clearing the place as promised by the Government. The sappers and miners had struck for back pay and got it.

Further by the Overland Mail.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, July 19.

The Overland Mail of the 27th ult. has reached this city.

The prisoners escaped from the California Penitentiary by overpowering the guard; twelve of them were recaptured, and eight were shot in the bushes in endeavoring to escape arrest.

The Italians in San Francisco have raised $5,000 to send to King VICTOR EMANUEL for the benefit of his needy subjects.

The people of Carson Valley have called a Convention for the 18th of July, to consider the public safety of the proposed territory of Nevada. The election for delegates to Congress is fixed for the 2d of July.

The weather was intensely hot throughout California, parching vegetation, some parts of the country looking as though they had been burned.

The county of Santa Barbara had been visited by a terrible sirocco, forcing the people to shut themselves in doors, killing animals, and literally roasting the fruit on the trees. This occurred on the 17th ult.

The mining news from Fraser's River continues discouraging.

EIGHTH CENSUS.—We learn that Mr. JOSEPH C. G. KENNEDY, Superintendent of the Seventh Census, has been appointed under the act of March 3, 1850, making an appropriation preliminary to taking the eighth census, to have the direction of the work. In view of the intimate acquaintance possessed by Mr. KENNEDY with the whole subject of the census, the propriety of this appointment will be generally manifest, but will be more particularly approved by those who have had the opportunity of witnessing the vigor and system which his energy and perseverance infused into the previous one.—Nat. Intelligencer.

FROM ARIZONA.

Arrival of General Pesquera from Mazatlan—Disturbed State of the Frontier—Lieutenant Mowry Renominated as Delegate to Congress—Mexican Outrages—Return of the Gila Explorers—Severe Punishment in the Army.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Gen. PESQUERA arrived at Guaymas on the 16th, with five hundred troops and a fine train of artillery; his late success at the City of Mazatlan and in Sinaloa, has given him plenty of funds, which is all that is required to enable any party to carry on a revolution in Mexico. Personally, PESQUERA is not popular with foreigners; he is, however, a firm supporter o the Liberal Party, which gives him influence with the better portion of the inhabitants of Southern Sonora Really this present revolution is only a "war with families," dating back to the creating of Sinaloa out of the South of Sonora. GANDARA is a firm supporter of the "Church Party," which has had its day, not only in Sonora, but throughout the Christian world.

The disturbed state of the frontier, we believe, has induced the head of the Military Department of New-Mexico to order the return of Lieut. LORD's Company of Dragoons to Fort Buchanan; they are now at Fort Fillmore, it is said, because forage is cheap. If this principle is carried out, why not pasture the horses and set the men to work for their board.

Lieut. MOWRY has arrived in the Territory. A very enthusiastic meeting at Mesilla again nominated him as Delegate. MR. M. has done all in his power for the Territory of Arizona, or rather the county of Dona Anna, New-Mexico. In my mind a Territory ought not to be formed. I think it can not. Geography is against it, common sense is against it. West of Mesilla there is a country of one hundred miles wide and six hundred miles long, in which there is not over two hundred white legal voters, including all the mail stations of WELLS, BUTTERFIELD & Co.'s Overland Mail Company.

The Mexicans bitterly hate our race. Yesterday some dozen "set upon" one of our best citizens and literally riddled him with butcher knives. JOHN WARE, formerly of Baltimore, Md., has a ranch about one mile from Tubac, on the evening of the 24th, being St. John's day, several Mexicans who worked in the neighborhood, "got on" a little too much mescal, and in passing WARE's ranch were "barked at" by his dogs. WARE went out to call them in, when one of them grabbed him from behind, and some two or three gave him half-a-dozen stabs with knives. Mr. CAUTHERS, WARE's partner, shot one dead; a second is now in confinement in the quarters of the Sonora E. & M. Company, awaiting the result of the wounds. Dr. HUGHS is attending upon WARE, having dressed the wounds, and should he recover, it may be attributed more to his attention and skill, than to the good will of the Mexicans.

The mining interests continue to prosper. The best evidence we can offer of the richness of the mines, is the "official fact" that $1,100,000 of silver was received in San Francisco from the coast of Sonora and Sinaloa, within one month after the success of the Liberal party. In my mind, at least, as much more was smuggled out. The Sonora E. & M. Company continue to reduce $200 a day in sliver from one-eighth the capacity of their works. They are now waiting the arrival of an engine.

The last of the Gila explorers have returned to Tucson, after a hard and fruitless journey. They penetrated the country as far as the White Mountains, and within two days' journey of the settlements of the Zuni Indians. Their route was entirely new, but through a country similar in its physical features to that described by the former party—a succession of mountains and narrow valleys, with many small streams. Near one of the camps one of the company, Capt. A. BAKER found a species of root growing near a little stream, which he deemed edibles. He ate some himself, and handed portions to others. In about 20 minutes those who partook of the root were seized with dizziness and convulsions, and in 15 minutes more Capt. BAKER and Mr. NICHOLS expired in great agony. The other three were dosed with emetics, bled, and their lives saved, although they suffered intensely. MR. BAKER was an elderly man, believed to be from Texas. NICHOLS was from the State of New-York. Both were buried at the camp where they died. The root which caused such a deadly result is believed to be what is commonly known as the "wild parsnip."

Private ALENSON BENTLY, of K Company, First Dragoons, convicted of desertion and horse-stealing, was sentenced by the Court-martial lately in session at Fort Buchanan, to the following terribly severe punishment: To receive fifty lashes with a cowhide, well laid on the bare back, to be confined at hard labor until January, 1861, heavily ironed, to forfeit all pay due him, to have his head shaved, and be branded with a red hot iron with the letter D, to be drummed out of the service and receive a dishonorable discharge.

Letter from Mr. Sickles.

The following letter has been addressed to the editor of a morning journal by Mr. SICKLES in vindication of himself, in renewing his marital relations with his wife:

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, July 19, 1859.

Through the course of sad events, which during the last few months have brought so much affliction upon my family, I have been silent. No amount of misrepresentation affecting myself only could induce me now to open my lips; nor could I deem it worth while under any circumstances to notice what has been or can be said in journals never regarded as the sources or the exponents of public opinion, for in these it is too often obvious that only unworthy motives prompt the most vindictive assaults upon the private life of citizens holding public stations. But the editorial comments in the Herald of yesterday, although censorious, (of which I do not complain, whilst I read them with regret,) differ so widely in tone and temper from the mass of nonsense and calumny which has lately been written concerning a recent event in my domestic relations, that I cannot allow a mistake, into which you have been led by inaccurate information, to pass without such a correction as will relieve others from any share of the reproaches which it is the pleasure of the multitude at this moment to heap upon me and mine.

Referring to the forgiveness which my sense of duty and my feelings impelled me to extend to an erring and repentant wife, you observe, in the course of your temperate and dignified article, that, "It is said, however, that the last phase of the affair was brought about through the advice of his lawyers." This is entirely erroneous. I did not exchange a word with one of my counsel upon the subject, nor with any one else. My reconciliation with my wife was my own act, done without consultation with any relative, connection, friend or adviser. Whatever blame, if any belongs to the step, should fall alone upon me. I am prepared to defend what I have done before the only tribunal I recognize as having the slighest claim to jurisdiction over the subject—my own conscience and the bar of Heaven. I am not aware of any statute, or code of morals, which makes it infamous to forgive a woman; nor is it usual to make our domestic life a subject of consultation with friends, no matter how near and dear to us. And I cannot allow even all the world combined to dictate to me the repudiation of my wife, when I think it right to forgive her, and restore her to my confidence and protection.

If I ever failed to comprehend the utterly desolate position of an offending though penitent woman—the hopeless future, with its dark possibilities of danger, to which she is doomed when proscribed as an outcast—I can now see plainly enough, in the almost universal howl of denunciation with which she is followed to my threshhold, the misery and perils from which I have rescued the mother of my child. And although it is very sad for me to incur the blame of friends and the reproaches of many wise and good people, I shall strive to prove to all who may feel any interest in me, that if I am the first man who has ventured to say to the world an erring wife and mother may be forgiven and redeemed, that, in spite of all the obstacles in my path, the good results of th s example shall entitle it to the limitation of the generous, and the commendation of the just.

There are many who think that an act of duty, proceeding solely from affections which can only be comprehended in the heart of a husband and a father, is to be fatal to my professional, political, and social standing. If this be so, then so be it. Political station, professional success, social recognition, are not the only prizes of ambition; and I have seen enough of the world in which I have moved, and read enough of the lives of others, to teach me that, if one be patient and resolute, it is the man himself who indicates the place he will occupy; and so long as I do nothing worse than to reunite my family under the roof where they may find shelter from contumely and persecution, I do not fear the noisy but fleeting voice of popular clamor. The multitude accept their first impressions from a few; but in the end men think for themselves, and if I know the human heart—and sometimes I think that in a career of mingled sunshine and storm I have sounded nearly all its depths—then I may reassure those who look with reluctant forebodings upon my future to be of good cheer, for I will not cease to vindicate a just claim to the respect of my fellows; while to those motley groups, here and there, who look upon my misfortunes only as weapons to be employed for my destruction, to those I say, once for all, if a man make a good use of his enemies, they will be as serviceable to him as his friends.

In conclusion, let me ask only one favor of those who, from whatever motive, may deem it necessary or agreeable to comment in public or private upon this sad history; and that is, to aim all their arrows at my breast, and for the sake of my innocent child, to spare her yet youthful mother, while she seeks in sorrow and contrition the mercy and the pardon of Him to whom, sooner or later, we must all appeal.

Very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

DANIEL E. SICKLES.

LETTERS FROM COUNTRY LOUNGERS.

Sharon Springs.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

"HOLE IN THE WALL," Sharon Springs, July 18, 1859.

We came here by the North River boat up the North River as far as Albany, whence we took the cars to Palatine Bridge, and thence by stage to our present moorings. We first attempted the "Pavilion," but "Sharon is full," so were obliged to put up with a "Hole in the Wall."

"Sharon is full"—which means that the "Pavilion" is—for the Pavilion bears the same relation to Sharon that Paris does to France. It is the "cock of the roost," and if you're not a Pavilioner you're nobody, and might as well be nowhere as be at Sharon. When Sharon is empty, Sharon is a very hard place to get in. The "facilis decensus averni" reversed is nothing to it, but when Sharon (of course we mean the Pavilion) is full, then—"Sharon is full." How many disconsolate wights have we seen drop their lower jaw at that terrible dictum—"Sharon is full." In fact, the only wight there admitted is "broiled white," and that the Pavilion has every day for dinner. Of course the society here is rich, for it is the "creme de la creme" of New-York, Philadelphia, Boston, and if there be any other town of any importance in the United States, Sharon has its representative. But it is harder to enter than Congress. You can get in there by going to Wisconsin or Kansas, &c., but no such indirect route leads to the Pavilion. No, indeed, you must have credentials of a higher order. At the Pavilion, everybody knows everybody else, and the lord of the manor knows them all. "Oh it is very nice, the society at the Pavilion. It is so charming," said a young lady of the rose-bud order to us one day—"it is so charming to meet only people that you know." We like bread and butter occasionally. Another advantage of the Pavilion is—the dogs. You can't turn a corner without stepping on a dog's tail. These dogs are principally of the "black and tan" order. These dogs would be an interesting study—but in hot weather dogs are too suggestive, and there's not one of them with a muzzle. We would rather face the mouth of one forty-pounder than those of forty dogs on a hot day. But the Pavilion is a "little kingdom of its own," and one word of expostulation and off you go instead of the dogs. Besides its veneration for dogs in which it somewhat resembles the ancient Egyptians, only they worshiped cats, it on the contrary differs from them in another respect—that namely of caste. Servants as well as dogs are allowed to "range the house." We know that the United States is a Republic and a great country, and we believe in freedom and equality, but, singular to say, we don't believe in servants lolling about in easy arm-chairs or writing letters at the same table with you, or even in their grinning and cracking jokes at your expense. The result of this too great liberty is easy to be foreseen. The attendance becomes indifferent. These luxurious waiters acquire habits of indolence and carelessness. We acknowledge they are very good-natured with it all for though they do nearly knock out your eye with a fork, drop the butter knife into your pocket and spill scalding tea over your thinly-breeched legs, still they console you with a good, hearty laugh, which is very refreshing, coming as it does from the cause of all your mishaps. We have seen "High Life below stairs" on the stage, but we never saw the representation of "Low Life up stairs" before, and we must confess we don't like the piece.

The Pavilion not only has its own peculiar government, but it like wise has its own religion. This is millenial, for it has but one church called the "Union," and in this all sects and denominations may preach indiscriminately. The history of this church constitutes a singular episode in the annals of the Pavilion, and it may also be said to commence a new era in the history of the world—for, since the Reformation, no such great event has occurred as the union of all sects into one church. Its history may be briefly given as follows: It was certainly not more than a century ago that the adherents of the Pavilion began to feel the need of a church. In a short time the necessary amount was raised by subscription, when in steps an Episcopal clergyman and asks for the money to build the church. The ruler of the Pavilion immediately "got his back up," and retorted that the object of the subscriptions was not to build the church but a church, and in process of time his remark was verified by the appearance of "a neat and convenient edifice" on the Pavilion territory. Thus far it has been preached in twice—once by a Presbyterian, and once again by a Presbyterian. Whether it is to be always a Presbyterian remains to be seen, but it is quite certain it will never be an Episcopalian, for that sect now have a church of their own—a very neat edifice, but not quite so "convenient" nor commodious as the "Union."

Notwithstanding all its peculiarities, Sharon is a most delightful place. The air is so exhilarating that you seem to drink in nectar at every draught. Cocktails are consequently at a discount. Not only, too, are you exhilarated through your drinking apparatus, but your very eye is constantly fed. The country smiles on you with such a bright, joyous glance, and looks so benevolently and blandly at you, that even when you do tread on the "black and tan" tails you have no inclination to kick their owners forty feet into the air with the interrogation, "What are you doing there?" On the contrary, you leave out the interrogation and kick them a much shorter distance. The very countrymen of the place seem to be under its spell, or rather talk, for whenever you meet one he accosts you with "How do you do, Sir?" The first time we were thus addressed by a man we had never seen before, we were somewhat astonished, to be sure, but we only shouted out in return, "Hallo! how are you?" as though we'd known him for centuries.

There is one thing, however, that entirely exceeds our comprehension, and astonishes us much more than the cordial greetings of the countrymen. We find ourself constantly called "blasé," "played out," and other equally ignominious appellations, merely because we are not seen all day and all night on the front piazza with the ladies. What in the name of common sense does a man go to the country for, if it is not to talk nonsense to ladies on front piazzas? We must confess we have yet to learn the fact, for we have not succeeded thus far in getting it into our stupid noddle. On the contrary, we believe man goes into the country for quiet and recruiting purposes. We believe in walks, in woods, in quiet nooks, in watching water trickling over rocks, in looking at quiet old cows grazing on the hillsides, in contemplating sunsets and moon-risings. We believe in poking about alone and seeing grass and butterflies, and it is a great source of pleasure for us merely to see the wind scatter the gray hairs of aged dandelions. We like dearly, too, to hear bumble-bees, provided they don't come too near, and the smell of a pine wood fairly enchants us. What, in short, is it but the country itself that man goes into the country for? The rustle of silks and the twaddle of women you can get in the city. We don't care in the country whether Mrs. So and-so is dressed better than Mrs. What-you-call her; nor for tea-fights in low, dingy rooms, with dirty tallow candles sputtering out bad smells, nor for rolling ten-pins in close alleys, nor billiard-playing under ground. We came to the country to get out of all this. We shun the ham of men to hear the hum of Nature, and so—we are "blasé." Well, we only hope we'll keep so.

Yours, truly,

"A HOLE IN-THE-WALL" MAN.

The City Railway System of Philadelphia.

Eleven lines of City Railroads, running upwards of three hundred cars, are now in operation in Philadelphia. Eight more Companies are chartered, and it is estimated that the number of cars will be increased to four hundred before the end of the present year. This is a remarkable result for an experiment started less than two years ago. The Philadelphia North American has the following interesting exhibit:

"Several of these companies run more than one line. The Second and Third Streets Company runs one line of cars straight up and down the whole length of those streets, another from the Exchange to Richmond, and a third to Bridesburgh. The Fifth and Sixth Streets Company has two lines, one running from Frankford to the northern suburbs of the city, and the other the whole length of the streets named. The Green and Coates Streets Company runs three lines, one the whole length of those streets from Fairmount to Oak-street, another from Fairmount to Walnut-street, and a third from Fairmount to Southwark. The Tenth and Eleventh runs two lines, one going from the County Prison to Camac's Woods, and the other branching off out of Poplar-street to Girard College, and it is about to run still another to Germantown, via the North Philadelphia Plank-road. The Spruce and Pine Streets Company has two lines, one running from the Exchange to the Arsenal, and the other from the Arsenal to Grey's Ferry.

Connections of all kinds are constantly being formed to cheapen fares for long distances and attract custom. In this way one may take a car on almost any city rail line, and buy a ticket for Red Bank for ten cents, or taking the boat at Red Bank, return for the same fare. The Gray's Ferry line, which is one of those in this combination, has also arranged a communication with the Darby railway, so that passengers are now carried from the Exchange, or any point on Pine-street, to Church-lane, Woodlands, Gray's-lane, Blue Bell, Maylandville, Mount Moriah and Darby.

These companies contribute occasionally to celebrations at rural points to which their lines lead, and thus keep alive business. Some of them have caused public resorts in such places to be opened to the people, and all have given a great impetus to improvements, particularly near their terminal points. The amount of work they throw into the hands of operatives is astonishing. There is constantly some branch or turnout to be laid, and all the city companies maintain regular gangs of laborers to keep the streets in repair, this having been found absolutely necessary. The Arch-street company has a water tank carried up and down that street all day to keep down the dust, and the Spruce and Pine streets company is also having one built for use on its line. The Green and Coates streets company is building another immense addition to its car-houses in Coates-street, and has been making improvements on Landing-avenue.

The building of lines of horse-railway to the country villages in the environs, has probably only just commenced. The places already provided are Darby and Maylandville by one line, Germantown by two, Haddington and Hestonville by two, Frankford by one, Bridesburgh by one, Olney by one, and Haverford by one. The business of these country branches is no doubt destined to become of great importance; for, since these facilities were offered, on some of the lines there has been a great rush of population to rural residences.

Should all the lines chartered go into actual operation, it is impossible to foresee the extent of the railway interest in Philadelphia. They would raise the number of cars to five hundred, within two years. The number of cars is already about equal to the number of omnibuses in the palmiest days of the omnibus system, but their capacity is three times as great, and the business done is in accordance. Every car running employs at least one driver and one conductor, so that with three hundred and thirty cars running, there are six hundred and sixty drivers and conductors. But the number is much larger than this, as the labor is so severe that it has been found necessary to have additional drivers and conductors to allow of the men having a day or two every week to rest, so that the number is over seven hundred. If to these we add the officers, hostlers, repair-men, gangs of pavlors, switch-tenders, starters, &c., the aggregate would much exceed a thousand men. Each of these three hundred and thirty-one cars cost $700, making in the aggregate $231,000 for the cost of the cars now running. There are about two thousand horses used, and as they are all good stock, will average $100 the horse, making in all $200,000 for the value of horses, so that the investment in cars and horses represents in the aggregate $431,000. The buildings erected by these companies are enormous, but we can make no calculation of their value. Some $10,000 are disbursed weekly for salaries and other expenses."

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Evening Journal writes a letter from the Flume House giving a description of New-York, which, coming from a Philadelphian, is worth quoting. Approaching the City by way of the Narrows, he was greatly astonished at the number of ships in the stream. He says:

The immense fleet was packed in at its moorings so closely, and extended so far out from the wharves into the stream, as to present the aspect of a dense wilderness of pine trees, whose foliage and branches had been stripped off by the elements, and their bare, bleached trunks left standing alone in their desolation, like the skeleton of a once green and living forest. This appearance of the scene was heightened by the veil of mist through which it was descried, the obscurity of the view allowing the fancy to supply the details of a picture of which the outlines only were seen with distinctness. But I was more impressed by the sight as an evidence of the marvellous commercial greatness of New-York. I had never seen elsewhere one-hundredth, or perhaps one-thousandth part of the shipping which I then beheld concentrated at one point. I recollected also that what I then saw was but a fraction of the entire mercantile marine of the "Empire City"—that thousands of vessels trading or belonging to the same port, were scattered far and wide upon distant seas and upon the great ocean—many being in foreign harbors bound for home, others on their return voyage from the extremities of the earth, and still others speeding away over the deep to various and remote lands. It was truly said by a gentleman near me—a fellow townsman—that there was more shipping anchored out in the North River and the Bay, than the entire aggregate of vessels to be found at any time in the port of Philadelphia. I never before was made so completely conscious of the pre-eminent grandeur and power of New York as a metropolis, and the comparative insignificance of every other American city. What I witnessed in ten minutes' run down the bay to Castle Garden, cured me effectually of all petty feeling of jealousy which I had ever felt as a Philadelphian towards New-York. I had to acknowledge immeasurable superiority in every commercial point of view—I had to realize that God had obviously designed it for one of the few great centres of the world's trade and intercourse, and that he had endowed it with every natural advantage and condition of aptitude for that purpose, and I must confess that the people entrusted with the execution of the Almighty's will in the matter, have achieved it fully by the noblest enterprise and industry. The population of other cities nearly it not quite as well circumstanced for commercial and industrial growth, have been content to rely wholly on the natural capacities and facilities of the several places, and hence they have fallen far in the rear of an emporium whose chief element of progress has consisted in the metropolitan spirit, the bold and generous enterprise, and the energetic activity of its citizens, and which, without that element in its competitors, irrespective of all other conditions, need fear no rivalry in all time to come. Let us, then, with this conviction, hang our diminished heads, and brag and rail and sneer no more, until we can exhibit something of that admirable temper, intelligence and energy which have made New-York what she is, and which only can make any city great and prosperous. I have seen young men who, fancying they would rely on their genius to attain honorable fame and influence in the world, have neglected to educate their native talents, and have been dunces and drones all their lives; and any community that depends for advancement in commerce on the geographical and like surroundings and attributes of the locality in which they dwell, without putting forth any exertion and applying any means to improve the natural advantages and resources of the situation, will as surely fail in their calculations.

Reaching New-York early on Wednesday morning last; I spent the day, hot as it was, in traversing some of the principal streets and looking about me. The great roaring human tide was pouring as usual, its two contrary currents up and down Broadway. That spectacle of itself is enough to stun a person who beholds it after many years of sojourn amid the calm village-like quietness, the semi stagnation, and the Methodistical sobriety of the "Quaker City." All was hurry, bustle, noise and confusion, yet through all this turmoil and entanglement there reigned a certain kind of rude, but effectual order—a system of movement which carried every individual of the mass to his destined aim and the execution of his particular mission. I saw the faces, the costumes, and almost the manners of nearly all races and lands, pass before me, yet no one stopped to remark his neighbor, no matter what grotesqueness of apparel, or strangeness of physiognomy, or singularity of deportment, distinguished him from the crowd. Here was a characteristic of cosmopolitanism which marks only these two or three microcosms in which the world is epitomized by representative persons and classes, and habits and habiliments, gathered together from all extremities of it, and commingled familiarly, until they cease to regard each other's peculiarities. London, Paris and New York are such places, and one cannot live in either without having his ideas enlarged, his philanthropic sentiment developed, and his views of life—of its duties and relations—expanded to the measure of the habitable globe. New-Yorkers are not actuated in their business affairs and speculations by any narrow feeling of individualism. They are moved within their immediate municipal limits by an intense sense of community, or public spirit, or local pride; and, extending this principle still further, they seek intimate communication and connections with all nations, and hence take hold, energetically, and promote all measures necessary to bring the interests of the world within the circle of their particular interest, and thereby centralize its commerce, and wealth, and speculative aims in New-York. Nothing impresses you more forcibly with the amazing activity of this city, than a walk through its main business thoroughfares and along its crowded wharves. It is hard to press through the crushing throng of pedestrians and vehicles, and one who is not used to it is soon wearied and perplexed and even terrified by the mêlée in which he is threatened, every moment, with being run down or run over.

The Boston Journal, July 19, says: "A brief hearing was had this morning, before Judge METCALF sitting in Chambers, on the case of the slave MARIA, who was yesterday brought to this city from Plymouth, on a writ of habeas corpus. MARIA was in Court this morning, accompanied by her counsel and a that country is the inevitable consequence of the present state of politics. Among tradesmen you find a disposition to square accounts, to draw in from all transactions partaking in the slightest degree of a wide, let alone a speculative, character. Many are inquiring whether, in the event of a war—seeing that they have already commercial relations—it would be open to them to set up trade in England. Medical men long in practice among English communities are looking out for berths across the channel; and families who have been resident here for years are submitting their goods and chattels to the hammer, in preparation for their flight."

Now from beginning to end this is false. Thousands of Americans now in Paris can testify to the utter absurdity of such a statement. There are hundreds and thousands of English families residing in Paris who have no thought or fears of war. They crowd our places of public amusement, rent apartments, buy furniture and settle down in Paris as they have ever done since the advent of the Empire, without a thought or care to render their stay an unhappy one. I defy any one to name any commercial man who is so anxious to cease his transactions with the English, and, in fact, I would not have noticed these absurd assertions were they not so utterly unfounded. However, the Herald has long been renowned for having alarmists as correspondents from Paris. I remember that last year the Herald informed its readers that Paris was in a state of seige, and that February was to see the whole city delivered up to destruction. It is surely time that assertions so false and so easily reported should cease. They are an insult to public sense. Misrepresentations of that nature are too gross. Thousands of Americans now in Paris, can testify to the fact that never was the city more gay at this season of the year, and that never were there more English settled in Paris than at present. Even in the English Parliament, where men of mediocre talents eagerly seize upon invasion as a theme sure to bring them into notice, the thing is being played out, and the English, fatigued with so much noise and clamor, will not listen to the idea of arming to defend themselves against the imaginary attacks of a nation that is an ally.

This language of Prussia is reassuring, while her attitude is alarming. But the battle of Solferino has caused due reflection to be made by the Prussian Cabinet, and now we find their official journals assuring us that Prussia certainly does not intend to fight for the purpose of regaining the possession that Austria has already lost in Italy. All that Prussia has intended was to make herself the head of Germany, and all she will do for Austria will be just enough to maintain Austria as the second Power instead of a rival Power. Still, in playing this game, Prussia runs the risk of involving herself, as well as Germany, in a war; if so, she must get out of the scrape the best way she can, without hoping for aid or assistance. England will not mix in the matter, and Russia has seasonably reminded Prussia that the Germanic Confederation is essentially defensive. Thus, if Prussia departs from that position while the war is now confined to Italy, she will manifestly be in the wrong, and will surely rue the consequences.

The late troubles at Perugia, in the Papal dominions, have caused a great excitement in our political circles, and many of our journals have warmly espoused the cause of the oppressed inhabitants. The result has been that the French Government, anxious to render justice to the Pope's Government, has caused it to be made known that the French journals must not attack the Papal Administration. The Minister of the Interior has given the following warning to the Siecle:

"The journal the Siècle, in this day's number, when attacking the Papacy in its political power, and in tae dogmas of which it is the august personification, confounds the noble cause of Italian independence with that of the Revolution. The Emperor's Government has to protest against such a confusion, which is of a nature to excite evil passions, to trouble men's consciences, and to mislead public opinion as to the true principles of French policy. Respect and protection of the Papacy form part of the programme which the Emperor is gone to carry out in Italy—'to found order on rightful interests satisfied.' The journals which seek to misrepresent the character of the glorious war we are now engaged in are wanting in what is most obligatory in the national sentiment. If a deplorable conflict has taken place at Perugia, the responsibility must fall on those who compelled the Pontifical Government to make use of force in defence of its rights. The political independence and spiritual sovereignty united in the Papacy entitle it to twofold respect, and morality condemn the attacks against which the Government might have had recourse to legal repression; but it has preferred leaving them to the justice of public opinion."

The director of the Siècle answers and protests against any desire to injure the Government or power of the Pope, but asserts his right to find fault with the policy now pursued by the Cardinal ANTONELLI, who manages matters for His Holiness. ANTONELLI is Austrian at heart, owes his position and influence to Austria, and he is the person to blame for the late outrages. An American family having been maltreated and robbed by the Swiss soldiers at Perugia, the Representative of the United States at Rome has taken down the American escutcheon from his door, and left Rome. He was at Leghorn on the 29th ult. The Pope will thus find himself in a difficulty with Brother Jonathan, who will no doubt insist upon having his rights, and above all that the stars and stripes be respected. While upon the subject of the Pope I must tell you that His Holiness insists upon sending to Milan the Bishops and other clergy that were named to him by Austria, to fill the offices at Milan. Now the Piedmontese authorities in that city very justly refuse to receive these Austrian agents into their city—asking the Pope to name others to the offices destined to these. Other cause for complaint and quarrel exist, and one which may much shake the justice of his Holiness' cause. The successor of St. Peter is not by far so humble as he might, could or should be, and is fast gathering up against himself vials of wrath.

Last Sunday the Te Deum for the victory of Solferino was celebrated at the Cathedral of Notre Dame, in this city. It was known that the Empress was to attend in state, and early in the morning an immense crowd filled all the streets leading to the Cathedral.

The Garde Nationale and several regiments of the line formed a haie reaching from the Palace of the Tuileries to the Cathedral. At 11 o'clock the cortége issued from the Court yard of the Palace. First came a detachment of Hussars; then the carriages of the Princess MATHILDE; then those of Princess CLOTHILDE, and finally a grand gala carriage used by Her Majesty on State occasions, in which were seated herself and the little Prince Imperial. As soon as this vehicle appeared in the street, a universal shout of Vive l'Imperatrice! Vive le Prince Imperial! was raised, while showers of bouquets were thrown into and on the carriage. Flags and banners were waving on all sides, while the clang of trumpets and the quick rolling of drums announced that Her Majesty was proceeding in state to the Cathedral. The entire distance she was greeted with such shouts as are never heard but where there is a real and sincere affection felt by the people for the object of their ovation. The Old Cathedral of Notre Dame, that has so often witnessed grand ceremonials within its hallowed walls, was never more gorgeously decorated than last Sunday. Rich hangings of velvet and gildings were most profusely put about the church. Under a splendid panoply covered with plumes and gilding was a raised seat or throne for the Empress, on her left and right were the members of the Imperial family, Princes and Princesses now in Paris. All the chief officers of the Crown were present in full uniform, while the members of the Imperial household were in their Court dresses. The sight of the brilliant assembly was one fabulously beautiful, and the ceremony was grand and imposing. At its conclusion the cortége once more passed through the streets, amid the hearty and prolonged cheers of an immense multitude. SIX P. M.

We have just received the official news that the Diet has voted the Prussian propositions, which consist in sending different corps d'armée of observation on the banks of the Rhine, under the command of the Crown of Bavaria, Prussia being charged with the direction of the general affairs of Germany.

"VALEGGIO, Monday, July 4—9 A. M.

The French army now marches upon Verona. The Piedmontese have regularly commenced the siege of Peschiera. The Emperor NAPOLEON having sent back to Austrian head-quarters all the wounded Austrian officers, and asked for an exchange of prisoners, a messenger came to the French camp, announcing that by orders of the Emperor FRANCIS JOSEPH, they would follow the example, and send back the wounded French prisoners, and that they would also exchange prisoners."

It is now ascertained beyond a doubt that the defeat of the Austrians at Solferino has completely demoralized the Austrian army. The Emperor FRANCIS JOSEPH and his suite were obliged to fire with their pistols upon the flying soldiers to get them to make way for the Emperor to pass. They answered with threats and menaces when told to stand aside, and the Emperor's suite at once fired upon them. Had but the storm come upon them at this moment, the exasperated soldiers might have retaliated, but seizing the opportunity, the cortége passed rapidly by, and the Emperor never stopped until safe within the walls of Verona. DEAN.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE BATTLE.

From Our Italian Correspondent.

[The following letter is not so late as others from the same hand, or as those of our editorial and regular correspondents; but we regard the matter it contains as of sufficient interest to justify its publication.—ED. TIMES.]

MILAN, Saturday, June 25, 1859.

I posted my letter to you this morning the moment I read the telegraph concerning "a great battle at Solferino." Meaning to start instantly for Brescia, I find now that the train does not start until 4 P. M., so I shall employ the intervening time in finishing off some details which seemed to me of less importance than immediate news from the scene of action. Besides, I must confess, Milan is intolerable to an impatient mortal like myself, it is so near, and yet so far; and when we receive the French, English and German papers, we find that they have nearly all the particulars of an engagement almost as soon as we receive the telegrams. Still I own Milan is the best place for a correspondent of whom the "latest news" is not expected, as it is a sort of centre whither travels news from North, South, East and West, very slowly, but very certainly. To-day, however, to remain at Milan is out of the question. The telegram is very ambiguous; "the whole of the allied army was engaged;" "the fight was long and furious;" "our losses are but too considerable;" this does not look like a victory! and yet "the Austrians were driven back along the whole line," so it is not a defeat. We are all on the qui vive, every one becomes oracular, consequently every neighbor is a bore, and nothing remains but to go and see! I told you of the excitement caused by the infamous conduct of the Swiss in Perugia; a very curious scene has just taken place before my eyes. (I am writing at a café close to the railway station.) Pasted up on a sheet of dirty paper on the opposite wall were the words Morte ai Svizze; a number of working-men were gathered round, who, by their gestures, evidently showed that they approved the injunction. A man of about 30 I should say approached, thrust his arm through the crowd, and quietly tore down the placard. "He's a Swiss," exclaimed the group, evidently about to lay violent hands on the paper. "No," replied the other, quietly crumpling up the placard, and holding up his right hand, minus the three fore fingers, "I lost those under MANARA, at Porta Tosa, on the 23d of March, 1848, and for this I have been refused at *Piazza Borromea, where I advise you to go and enlist instead of getting up rows to disturb the public peace." "Segura de si?" "El dis ben!" "Andere fioi?"† they exclaimed in patois, shaking hands with the brave young Lombard, who, unable himself to enter GARIBALDI's legion, evidently spared no pains to induce others to do so. I mention this as a proof of the good dispositions of the Milanese, who exasperated, and most justly, at the disgraceful inhuman butchery perpetrated by the dastardly Swiss at Perugia, yet at a word of remonstrance, recognized the injustice of avenging the wrongs of the Perugians on the innocent Swiss here. A gentleman in this city has received a list of forty-nine men, women, children, and two babes at the breast, murdered, for sheer love of murder, after the Swiss entered the city. A young artist of great promise, much beloved in Perugia, was among the number. Yet, with our sorrow for the sufferers, our indignation against their inhuman, cowardly assassins, mingles a sort of consoling consciousness that the "Holy father" has given the death blow to his temporal dominion, and that no country, Catholic or Protestant, in this Nineteenth Century of ours, will dare to protest in favor of the Pope, if all his subjects in self-defence throw off his stupid, barbarous, besotted yoke and ally themselves to the other States of Italy, under VICTOR EMANUEL.

I told you yesterday that a certain BRONZETTI was among the wounded "hunters" at Rezzato. Poor fellow! his biography is an interesting one. He fought throughout '48 and '49, and was one of the first to join GARIBALDI. After five hours combat at Rezzato he received a wound in the left arm. "Onward!" he cried, "it's nothing!" Another ball in the right arm, when he passed his sword to the wounded left, crying, "Onward soldiers! onward ever!" Another ball passed in at his left side, lodging in the right ribs; then he fell. Four soldiers bearing him from the field fell under the enemy's balls, and finally one bore him off and he was transported to Brescia. On the morrow of the fatal 16th, for so the "hunters" name the day, in which, though triumphant, so many of their numbers fell, GARIBALDI wrote the following from his headquarters, and it reached Brescia just in time to cheer the last moments of the dying hero! "Dearest BRONZETTI: You are certainly above all praise, and have earned the title given to you of 'bravest of the brave' in our ranks. Your courage will conquer your wounds, and you will be restored to your companions in arms. Receive a fraternal embrace from your friend, GARIBALDI." He was never more "restored to his companions in arms," but was buried on the morrow!

Col. TURR is also seriously wounded. He has distinguished himself throughout the campaign. He was one of the officers sent by GARIBALDI to the Val Canonica, from Bergamo. Returning to Bergamo he rejoined Col. COSENZY, whose audacity, some say rashness, led to the disaster at Rezzato. It is always very well to blame when success is wanting; everything that has been done by these hunters has been accomplished by sheer audacity against desperate odds, with bad arms, little or no support, and with numbers always vastly inferior to the enemy. The Official Gazette, of Milan, now called La Lombardia, announces that KOSSUTH, accompanied by three majors, arrived at Genoa the day before yesterday. He goes with a confidential friend of Count CAVOUR to Parma to see Prince NAPOLEON, and thence to the head-quarters of the Emperor. Everywhere the population receive him with heartfelt welcome. The adhesion of GARIBALDI and KOSSUTH to the Italian policy of LOUIS NAPOLEON has done more to wipe out the memory of the Imperial past than any of his personal acts could do. If GARIBALDI can drown the memory of Rome in hopes for Italy's future, how can we remain obdurate? Ye, the pains the Lombards take to convince you that the moment the Austrians are driven out the French will retire with the blessing of the liberated populations for their sole recompense shows that they desire it far more than they believe it.

"Vorrei che gli Austriaci crepassero, e i Francesi morissero di ridere"—May the Austrians all burst and the French die of laughing at them—said an Italian the other day, repeating an old bon mot, and if all spoke out their minds as freely as my old misanthrope they would but echo his words. My hopes, I repeat, are placed in the volunteers, the people and the King! CHARLES ALBERT failed to be King of Italy because, MACBETH like, he ever let "I dare not, wait upon I will." His rough, jolly soldier son lives by the day and makes no plans for the future. His blood is up. I have taken great pains to separate the actual from the fabricated in the stories that circulate about his daring—and even the French soldiers, who are given to denigrer all that is not French, say: "C'est un brave garçon; il est digne de combater avec nous?"‡

The most distressing news reaches us of arrests at Venice. Things cannot go on as they are much longer. We shall have open revolution unless the French and Sardinians effect their landing soon. Some time since I received a letter from the father of a large family—a nobleman and a proprietor—who, under any ordinary Government, would be considered in affluent circumstances. "I pay eighty-four per cent. taxes," he wrote, "and with the remaining sixteen per cent. I have to support my whole family. The feudal laws prevent me from alienating a shred of my estate. We are reduced to genteel beggary. And now a fresh decree, a forced loan of 50,000,000 florins ($25,000,000) is to be extorted from the Lombardo Venetian Kingdom! As the Lombards are free, the Venetians must pay the whole." I have heard New-Yorkers grumble at their American taxes. Let them ponder these facts.

Now I am off it may take me some days before I can get a clear notion of the "great battle;" if so, you must be patient. We receive a good many of the second rate English newspapers, all of whom have a correspondent at "the head-quarters of the allied camp," and at the head-quarters of the Austrian army! "What does this mean?" I asked of the correspondent of the London papers, who resides at Milan. "Well," he said, "you see if we date from Milan people turn up their noses, so we travel on the wings of fancy and 'make out.'" On my suggesting that the British people would think itself ill used if it knew the truth, he said "Well, our readers are better off than most, for the greater number of correspondences are made up in 'the office.'" And this is literally the case. With the exception of the London Times no correspondent is permitted within the sacred precincts; if by hook or by crook they arrive there tant mieux, but very few have the "pluck" to risk being sent away! Facts are stubborn things!

BRESCIA—Midnight.

But for the disappointment which your readers would feel at seeing no letter from your own Correspondent, I can assure you "I should not now be closing my eyes to recal for their benefit the sad, glad, exciting scenes which have passed before me during the last four hours; but I should, instead, be at the bedside of some of the poor, suffering fellows whose groans ring in my ears, writing to their friends a few last words and wishes dictated by dying lips. Yes, the battle of Solferino was a great battle, and a great victory was gained there—but at a sacrifice of human life which is terrible to contemplate. Brescia is reeking with the wounded who are still pouring in; they tell me that all the villages around are converted into vast hospitals, where French, Piedmontese, and the various races who wear the white uniform, are lying pell-mell! Fortunately for me, I recognized at the station a young Bersagliere who had gone there hoping to meet his mother from Turin, and arm-in-arm we entered Brescia in the twilight, he leading me from house to house where his wounded comrades lay, many of them belonging to the company of poor Capt. PALLAVACINI, who fell leading his men for the third time to the attack of San Martino! I can hardly realize the fact that these pale, corpse-like forms are the jaunty, dashing Bersaglieri I used to see parade the streets of Genoa with their hats on one side, full of pert cocks' feathers, floating tassels, plaited tunic and full trousers, the pictures of agility and insolence. I used to regard them with horror, for their corps it was which made itself so conspicuous in the sack of Genoa in 1849; but throughout those years neither the officers nor the soldiers, but the Government was to blame, and here on the plains of Lombardy these sharp-shooters have vied each with the other in doing honor to the Italian name. All those I have seen are well cared for; the Brescians, foremost in the field, and defiant from first to last in the very teeth of the Austrians, are the tenderest and most generous of hosts. The private houses, they tell me, are crowded from garret to kitchen. When GARIBALDI's men, some eighty of them, were wounded at Rezzato, some ten days since, the citizens fought for the honor of housing and nursing them; now, alas, the supply exceeds the demand! As yet I have a most confused idea of the great battle. My informant, who has promised to visit the battle-field with me to-morrow, sketched roughly the relative position of the Austrians and Piedmontese, the former forming the right wing of the Austrian army, the latter the left wing of the army of the Allies. According to the young Lieutenant, the Sardinians have fought with such desperate valor, that if called on to renew the battle to-day no single regiment could form a line! What can I say? that I regret their losses? Not a whit! The Italians profess to hold liberty dearer than life. I believe their professions, therefore I have no mournings for the dead in the Italian ranks. Let them die! Let their blood wash out the stain of slavery from Italian soil! If they can win their liberty they are fit to be free, not otherwise. Therefore I glory in Italian victories, even if they cost rivers of Italian blood.

*The office for the enrolment of volunteers for GARIBALDI's legion is removed to this place from the Gymnasium.

THE ROMAN QUESTION.

The Encyclical Letter of Pope Pius IX., Relative to Events in the Legations.

The following is the text of the Encyclical Letter addressed by the Pope, the 18th of June, to all the patriarchs, primates, archbishops, bishops, and to the other suffragans which are in favor of communion with the Apostolic See:

VENERABLE BRETHREN: Health and the Apostolic Benediction! The seditious movements which have recently broken out in Italy against the authority of the lawful Princes in those countries nearest the States of the Church, have invaded some of our provinces like a flame of fire. Instigated by this sad example, and incited by intrigues from without, they have withdrawn themselves from our paternal rule, and despite their small number, the adherents of the revolt demand that they should obey that one of the Italian Governments which, of late years, has become an enemy of the Church, of its lawful rights and of its sacred ministers. Reproving and lamenting the acts of rebellion by which a portion only of the people in these disturbed provinces disown with so much injustice our zeal and paternal care, and declaring publicly that the temporal sovereignty which the more faithless enemies of the Church of Christ strive to free themselves from is necessary to this Holy See, that it may use without impediment its sacred power for the good of religion, we address you the present letters, venerable Brethren, to find in the midst of so great a disturbance of the public peace some consolation for our grief. On this occasion we exhort you, also, in view of your declared devotion to the Holy See, and of your remarkable zeal for its liberty, to watch for the accomplishment of the command which we read was formerly made by Moses to Aaron, High Priest of the Hebrews; (Numbers, ch. xvi.) "Take a censer and put fire therein from off the altar, and put on incense, and go quickly into the congregation, and make an atonement for them; for there is wrath gone out from the Lord: the plague is begun." Thus we exhort you to offer prayer after the manner of those Holy brethren, Moses and Aaron, who, having fallen on their faces, said, "O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wrath with all the congregation?" (Numbers, ch. xvi.) For this reason we send the present letters from which we expect great comfort, because we feel confident that you will answer to our desires and our needs more than sufficiently. Besides, we say it boldly, clothed with power from on high, which God, touched by the prayers of the faithful give us in our weakness. We will face all dangers, we will undergo all trials rather than fail in our apostolic duty or do anything that may conflict with the sanctity of the oath by which we were bound, when despite our unworthiness we were raised by the will of God to the supreme seat of the Prince of Apostles, the citadel and rampart of the Catholic faith. For the fulfillment of your pastoral charge, invoking upon you all joy and happiness, we grant you with affection for yourselves and your flock the apostolic benediction, the pledge of heavenly happiness.

Given at Rome, near Saint Peters', the 18th of June, in the year 1859, the fourteenth year of our Pontificate.

Address of Pope Pius IX. to the Consistory on the State of the Romagna.

VENERABLE BRETHREN: Besides the keen grief with which we in common with all other good men have been seized on account of the war which has broken out between Catholic nations, another very great affliction has come upon us. It is caused by the lamentable disorders excited in some provinces of our Pontifical States by the criminal and sacrilegious boldness of wicked men. You understand, venerable brethren, that we here lament that wicked conspiracy and rebellion of factious men against our civil sovereignty, holy and lawful, and against that of the sacred See. Some men of wonderful depravity, living in these provinces, have dared to endeavor to excite and to put in execution this conspiracy and rebellion by secret and wicked meetings; by shameful intrigues with individuals of neighboring States; by calumnious publications; by foreign arms, and by a multitude of other wicked artifices.

Here follows a recital of what occurred at Bologna June 12: "The rebels then pushed their wickedness and shamelessness so far as not to be afraid to change their Government, and to demand the dictatorship of the King of Sardinia. To this end they sent their deputies to that King."

[The allocation then relates the different events which occurred at Ravenna and Perugia, where the dictatorship of the King of Sardinia was likewise demanded.]

In enfeebling and undermining the temporal power of the Sovereign Pontiff, the enemies of the most holy religion seek, moreover, to insult it. Compelled by the duty of our Apostolic ministry, and by our sacred oath, to provide with the greatest vigilance for the defence of religion, and of all the rights and provisions of the Roman Church in their integrity and inviolability, as well as to sustain and preserve the liberty of the Holy See—liberty undoubtedly for the advantage of all the Catholic Church, and consequently obliged to defend the sovereignty granted by Divine Providence to the Roman Pontiffs for the free exercise of ecclesiastical primacy over the whole world, and obliged to transmit it entire and unimpaired to our successors. We can only boldly condemn and abhor the efforts and wicked and criminal attempts of our rebellious subjects, and resist them with energy.

With these motives, after having by the note of our Cardinal Secretary of State sent to the Ambassadors, Ministers, and Chargés d'Affaires accredited near us, or by the holy seat, reproved and expressed our detestation of the violences of these rebels, now in the presence of your highly-respectable assembly, venerable brethren, raising our voice with all the energy of our soul, we protest against all that which the rebels have dared to do in the aforesaid localities, and by virtue of our supreme authority, we condemn, censure, annul, and abolish all and each of the acts at Bologna, Ravenna, and Perugia, in every other place, and by whatever pretence, shall have been done by these rebels against the Holy Seat; and we declare and decree that the said acts are null, illegal and sacrilegious. Moreover, we remind all concerned of the excommunication of the highest order, and of other pains and ecclesiastical censures enacted by several canons, by the apostolic constitutions, and by decrees of general councils, and especially by those of the Council of Trent, (22 sex., chap. 11, de Reform.) which shall be incurred, without the need of further declarations, by those who, in any manner whatever, shall dare attack the temporal authority of the Roman Pontiff; and we declare that they have already unhappily been incurred by all those who, at Bologna, Ravenna, Perugia, and elsewhere, have presumed by act, advice, assent, or by any other manifestation, to violate, trouble and usurp our power and civil jurisdiction, and that of the Holy Seat, and the Patrimony of St. Peter.

[After expressing the hope that the blindness of his subjects may be removed, and that they will return to a sense of duty, after obliging his paternal bosom to be angered against them, his Holiness proceeds:]

Sustained by this confidence in God, we are comforted by the hope that the Sovereigns of Europe, as in the past, so now, shall of one accord and with diligence, address themselves anxiously to defend and preserve our temporal authority, and that of the holy seat, seeing it is of the highest importance to each of them, that the Roman Pontiff should enjoy the most perfect liberty in order that he may be enabled properly to minister to the tranquillity of the conscience of Catholics dwelling within their States. This hope is also assuredly strengthened by the fact that the French armies actually in Italy, following the declarations of our very dear son in Jesus Christ, the Emperor of the French, not only do nothing against our temporal powers and that of the holy seat, but even defend and maintain it.

The following circular has been sent by the Swiss Government to its diplomatic agents abroad, in explanation of the assumed Swiss nationality of the troops employed in the late slaughter at Perugia.

The present is not the first occasion on which the absurd contradiction existing in the circumstance of a free country furnishing princes with mercenary soldiers, has been realized in Switzerland. It is long since the profound consciousness of this anomaly penetrated the hearts of the Swiss; and, before the regeneration of the Cantons and of the Confederation, the noblest sons of the republic, its most enlightened spirits, energetically raised their voices against the abuse.

It has been with the abolition of military capitulations as in all other human progress; it is only achieved with difficulty, and after arduous struggles. But we now have the satisfaction of having attained our end. As far back as 1830 the cantonal Constitutions had repudiated the military capitulations. The new Federal Constitution adopted the same principle, which it distinctly expressed in article 11: "No military capitulations shall be celebrated."

Federal legislation did not stop there; for, by its decree of June 20, 1849, confirmed July 24, 1855, it has forbidden every species of enrollment for foreign military service upon the soil of the Confederation. In its penal code, moreover, it threatens with fine and imprisonment the enlistment of Swiss citizens for foreign military service, and goes so far as to extend these correctional penalties to all the employes of the enlistment officers, established beyond the frontiers of Switzerland, in order to evade the law.

These dispositions exist not only in the abstract and upon paper, but as far as practicable they are enforced in all their rigor. The fact is evinced by a series of sentences already passed upon the enrolling agents in different parts of the Confederation. And if violations have not always been reached by penal authority, and if the formal text of the Constitution has proved insufficient to cause the mischief of enrollment entirely to disappear, the fact is attributable to circumstances which none regret more sincerely than ourselves. Negotiations have been opened with States adjoining Switzerland, with a view to repressing enrollments upon our frontiers, and we have the satisfaction of being able to declare that these efforts have not remained without results.

As regards the body of troops which at Naples retains the name of "The Swiss Regiments," all the old capitulations between that country and Switzerland have expired, with one exception, which comes to a termination on the 15th of the present month. We have already taken the necessary steps to have the cantonal and federal colors removed from the military ensigns of those corps. We hope moreover to make sure that these regiments shall not hereafter bear the name by which they have hitherto been designated, inasmuch as upon the day when the military capitulations expire, the name of "Swiss Regiments" will become a usurpation, since they will only be cognizable as "foreign regiments."

It is yet more wrongfully that the regiments in the service of the States of the Church are styled "Swiss." There exists with those States no sort of capitulation. Those which were at one time concluded were not ratified by the old diet. They were regarded as violations of the old federal code, and they cannot, therefore, be the subject of reproach to the Confederation. One of these capitulations, executed between the States of the Church and the State of Lucerne, in 1824, for the formation of a Swiss Guard, has long since expired, and been abolished by the constitution of that Canton.

Subsequently, in 1832, the Government of the States of the Church certainly contracted with private parties to form foreign regiments, and the enlistment was permitted in some of the Cantons, but without the ratification of Federal authority. These regiments were entirely dissolved in 1848, and the foreign regiments actually existing in the States of the Church are nothing more than an agglomeration of individuals from various countries, for whom Switzerland can in no sense be held responsible.

If, notwithstanding these facts, the foreign regiments in the service of the Pope continue to be designated as Swiss regiments: and if, as it seems, the words "mercenaries" and "Swiss" are in some quarters received as synonyms; we can only profoundly regret the circumstance, and protest energetically against such an abuse of language. Besides, if, as we are reliably informed, the regiments in the service of the Pope do not bear the title of "Swiss regiments," that title is of course abusive; and the case is entirely beyond our reach or remedy.

After you have openly exposed, Monsieur le Consul, this state of things, we hope you will satisfy yourself as well as our fellow-citizens residing in Italy, of the efforts we have made to execute, in regard to the question under discussion, the federal laws, and to preserve the dignity of the Confederation.

It is, unhappily, beyond the power of the federal authorities to interfere with the free will of individuals, who may desire to enlist in foreign service; but every one will understand at the same time, that Switzerland cannot accept the responsibility of acts purely personal. The power of other States does not exceed that of our own in this particular. For it is incontestible that in Italy at this moment in the two armies, beyond the belligerent nations, there are partisans belonging to neither, and who are originally from countries wholly neutral in the actual war.

In the name of the Federal Council,

STAEMPFI, President.
SCHIESS, Chancellor of the Confederation.

Church's Heart of the Andes in Engrand.

From the London Daily News, June 4.

One of the most remarkable pictures exhibited this season, is now on view at the German Gallery, New Bond-street. The artist—Mr. CHURCH, the American—has already established a high reputation in this country by his extraordinary painting of the "Falls of Niagara." Never before had the majesty of that scene, with all its infinite variety of toiling, foaming, eddying, glancing, crashing, broken, watersurface, been so impressively presented to the eye. Other representations may have been good for recollection, but the suggestiveness of that alone enabled those who had not seen the great Falls to form some idea of the gloriously terrible reality. The present picture is a worthy companion to the last. Mr. CHURCH seems to have proposed to realize the climax and acme of all that is grandest and most epical in his own great twin continent. Here we have a pictorial poem upon the immovable mountain-majesty of the great South American Cordilleras; before we had the most stupendous leap and plunge of the great rolling North American flood. The "Heart of the Andes" is a scene hitherto unexplored by the painter; but HUMBOLDT, with truth, observed that in no other section of the globe, not excepting the Alps and Himalayas, could the landscape painter acquire such an extent and variety of knowledge suited to his purpose, and receive such inspiration and impulse. Our own landscape painters, even after their annual trip to Snowdon, might well sigh for such a new world as this to conquer. On the other hand, Mr. CHURCH, our American cousin—or rather, let us say brother—has little or nothing to learn from the experience of the oldest European school or master. Yet, marvelous as is the skillful composition and comprehensive knowledge here displayed, Mr. CHURCH has never studied in the most conventional sense of the word; he has never visited the great galleries of art out of America. But he has done better; he has devoted several years to the study at first hand of the noble coast and mountain scenery of his native land. This was the training he had received before he resolved to open up for himself a field entirely new to all modern artists of note and ability. Original and elevated, however, as was his theme, he brought to it powers and capacity fully commensurate. The pre Raphaelite minuteness and self-evident accuracy of the foreground, and the broadly generalized, delicately graduated, and atmospheric distance of this picture, prove that the artist unites almost a contrariety of gifts. Breadth and finish are almost perfectly harmonized. The only obvious fault of the picture proves indeed the artist loves nature, not, perhaps, altogether wisely, but too well. Some of the foreground foliage, for example, is focussed in a kind of burning-glass intensity of sunlight, in order to more forcibly "pick out" certain beautiful points of detail. It may be pleaded that this gives, by contrast, greater value to the softness of the distance, and affords a key to the whole picture. But an artist should avoid every appearance of trick, and the old hacknied maxim, that the perfection of art is to conceal itself, can never, after all, be too often repeated. It occurred to us also that the smooth surface and glassy reflections of the river are scarcely natural, so immediately beneath a waterfall, though making every allowance for its swiftly gliding to another fall. But where there is such wonderfully varied merit and many landscapes excellences of the very highest order, it is almost hypercritical to make any exception whatever. We would gladly attempt to convey some general idea of this truly great picture, but that our space would not permit us to sketch ever so imperfectly all the richness here accumulated, as it were, from every zone and climate; all the luxuriance of tropical vegetation, of impenetrable sloping silvas and interminable table-land, and of great Andean snow-crested mountains, whose ranges almost bisect the earth, and from whose sides gush streams whose course is measured by the breadth of continents. In such a scene as this, Man, with his little red-roofed speck of distant hut, and even at his wayside worship before the crucifix, dwindles into pigmy insignificance. Over all this panorama of power, and majesty, and beauty, there mantles, however, only a sentiment of repose, calculated to awaken a still, deep feeling of veneration. TURNER himself, in wildest imagination, never painted a scene of greater magnificence than this view, which wears all the impress of nature's own unrivaled reality. We can only sum up that we recommend all who have any love of either nature or art to take an early opportunity of seeing a work which is in every way a triumph.

The damage to the Cunard steamer Canada by her recent collision with an iceberg, proves to have been serious. The Boston Journal says that the ship was taken into the dry-dock at the Charleston Navy-yard for examination, and it was found that her "apron" had been torn off at least eight feet below the main deck, and the ends of the planking on the starboard side so much affected as to require new ones. East Boston mechanics are busily at work repairing the damage, and have already replaced the broken stem by a new one.

Active measures are being taken by the Indian Office to guard against difficulties which might spring up between the Pawnee Indians and the whites, and for this purpose a special agent has been appointed to inquire into the recent conduct of those Indians, and to withhold their annuities, &c., in case they should have been at fault. Instructions are now being prepared at the office for the special agent. The appointment of a local agent to reside among the Pawnees is in contemplation.

RUFUS CHOATE.

Tributes to the Memory of Mr. Choate.

MEETING OF THE BOSTON BAR—SPEECHES OF GOV. BANKS AND RICHARD H. DANA, JR.

A formal meeting of the Boston Bar was held on Tuesday, July 19, in respect to the memory of the Hon. RUFUS CHOATE. Among the addresses delivered were the following, by GOV. BANKS and Mr. RICHARD H. DANA, Jr.

GOV. BANKS said:

MR. CHAIRMAN—Gentlemen who have spoken of the deceased brother of your bar, have alluded to him particularly with reference to his great honors as a member of the bar. I had not, Sir, the privilege and pleasure of knowing much of him in this relation. But I should think it a great injustice to the memory of the deceased, if reference only to his strength and power here were made on this occasion, when his memory is more or less largely and truthfully to be celebrated.

I rise, therefore, Sir, not to allude in any way to his great success in this field of his talents, but to speak of him, as a citizen of the Commonwealth and the nation, in another and equally important particular. It was my pleasure to know MR. CHOATE in his early life, not as a member of the Legislature, but as one who participated in its deliberations, and very much and very justly guided its conclusions. The first recollections of him which I have, and indeed, almost the first acquaintance which I made with any citizen of the Commonwealth, not in my own immediate neighborhood, was when he appeared as counsel before the Legislative Committees.

I listened with pleasure to what has been said of his power before a jury, and particularly of the beauty and power of reason which he displayed in his arguments before the judges alone; yet, after all, I believe that the great feature of his power was exhibited before the Committees of the Legislature, where his reason, his argument, his wit, his general temperament, bore most powerfully upon the minds that controlled the Senate of the Commonwealth, the Representatives, and the Executive, in their action on the great questions submitted to them.

I desire to say, although it may seem an intrusion, —because it is good for the men who shall come after us to know that when a man does his work well and truly, his efforts are to be celebrated and his name to be revered,—and I speak with the respect due to men in other professions,—I can without exaggeration say that in two or three respects there is a better example in the character and career of Mr. CHOATE than in that of any man in our community in these times.

In mentioning them, Sir, let me say that I have had no opportunity whatever, in the press of other duties, to follow that example of preparation set us by him, to which allusion has been made. The first, Sir, to which reference has already been made by several gentlemen, was the uniform kindness and affability which characterized his demeanor.

It was no schooling of temper, it was no absence of power, it was no courtesy wrung from him out of mere concession to what men call the rules of good breeding; it was that spirit implanted not so much in man as in woman, which makes the children of a common Father kindly to each other, it is the love which attaches men to the memory of Mr. CHOATE now, and attached them when he was still living among us; it was the power of affection that carried with him everywhere the kindness which he exhibited to all people.

He spoke to me, Sir, almost the first kind word I can say that ever touched my heart, outside of my own immediate circle of friends, when he knew me not, and when I scarcely knew him. How well do I remember, when a member of Legislative Committees, sitting, after a tedious session, as the evening shace closed in upon a cold Winter night, when everything was gloomy and dull, how, as he entered the room, that instant light broke in upon every member's and spectator's face, as he turned to the door where Mr. CHOATE appeared.

It was not so much that which beamed in his countenance, as the recollection of that kindness of spirit, that felicity of illustration and that pregnancy of wit which was more than wit, and even more than reason, which he exhibited in the smallest circle, as before the Court or jury in the presence of the bar, or before the multitudes or the people assembled to hang upon his lips.

We think too little of this power of love in moving men. I think history will bear me out in saying that there has never been a man who has had the power to sway the multitudes of men, to stamp his own opinions upon the history of his time, who did not have this power of attaching, through kindness, the nature of other men to him. And, therefore, I speak of this good nature in Mr. CHOATE not as a distinguishing trait of individuality, not as a good thing in man, but as an element of greatness—let me say, the truest and highest characteristic of power that man exhibits.

I have met Mr. CHOATE where the passions of men are more stirred, where their jealousies are more deeply excited, where they scarcely allow themselves to look upon each other with ordinary respect and trust; and in those circles I have seen in Mr. CHOATE a never-ceasing exhibition of this characteristic. And of all the men I have ever known in my life, I have known but one that approached him in this respect, a member of the Bar, deceased some years since, in whose office I had the honor to be enrolled as a student—I allude to the friend and associate of Mr. CHOATE, a son of the same County, pursuing in a great degree the same course of study, though differing from him in many respects,—the Hon. ROBERT RANTOUL, Jr.

By him alone I have known Mr. CHOATE to be equaled in this element of true greatness, a regard for the feelings and rights of every person, however lowly or however great.

In another respect Mr. CHOATE's example is one for all time. I do not desire to speak of him as a perfect man; but in these things it seems to me he is the fitting example of the young for the future. No man who has seen Mr. CHOATE can doubt his capacity for every occasion. With the brilliancy of his wit, the power of his logic, the discrimination of character which seemed to lay the whole world of m

Our Rural Manufacturing Establishments.

To any one who, interested in the yet unsolved problem of how best to benefit the working population, has observed the baneful influence both on mind and body exercised by pursuing their labors in the closely packed, ill-ventilated factories, reared in narrow alley-ways, where the breath of a thousand artisans mingles with the most unhealthy vapors—exchanged at night for the worse ventilated atmosphere of the tenement lodging—it is a source of relief to find in his Summer rambles, one of those busy hives of industry transplanted to some pleasant valley, where the pure air of Heaven freely circulates, carrying away all impurities, where the hammer's heavy fall is softened by a hundred echoes, where the melody of birds answers to the cheerful song of labor, and the working-man enjoys his noon-tide meal and hour of rest, stretched beside some shaded brook that comes tumbling merrily over the factory wheel. Such were my reflections as, one day this week, rambling along the Byrom River (an insignificant stream to form the boundary between New York and her shrewd neighbor,) over which a worthy citizen of Connecticut was in favor of granting PERCIVAL "discretionary power" to cross, when on his geographical survey—I (to speak after the Brobdignagian fashion, allowable to one from the metropolis of the Empire State, when on a tour among provincials,) "stumbled upon" the Screw Factory of RUSSELL, BURCHELL & WARD, imbedded in one of those secluded valleys, partaking more of the character of a deep ravine, with its steep, thickly-planted hills, jagged with rocks, which give this section of country across through Glenville such a romantic appearance, and forcish scenes that would delight the heart of a Scotchman or an artist. Here the Byrom takes a bend, or rather one of those abrupt sweeps which mark its zig-zag course, crosses the old Boston post-road, now almost abandoned to the solitary pedlar and neglected telegraph poles, and passes through the town of Portchester—a thriving out-post of New-York, which in its heathendom, exercises the good people of Connecticut not a little, by reason of the inducements it holds forth to "droughty neebors" there to meet and enjoy the cup "or auld lan' syne," prohibited to them over the line.

But leaving the Byrom, released from the strict rocky bounds through which it has passed, to spread out on its onward course, and returning to the factory whose busy hum so suddenly broke in upon my meditations, I forsook the contemplation of Nature that afternoon to study the works of man's genius. And I have found much that was interesting and instructive in watching the manufacture of the Screw—that mechanical force which has been one of the mighty "powers in the earth." On applying at the office, Mr. WARD, one of the proprietors, under whose immediate supervision the machinery is, very kindly showed me through the establishment, and I discovered, in the course of my inquiries, that a great portion of the ingenious contrivances which excited my admiration were of his own invention. Here I found one of those rare instances of inventive genius, based on sound mechanical knowledge and practical common sense, which, when combined, lead to such useful results. Mr. WARD has for fifteen years, in this quiet valley, devoted himself to the improvement—I might almost say perfection—of the machinery employed. It is always difficult, without the aid of wood-cuts, to give an idea of mechanical operations; but in a general way it may be interesting to some of your readers to know how nuts and screws, articles of such general utility, are made. Following my conductor to the far end of the establishment, where the forges glowed, we see a man drawing out a bar of iron at white heat, and laying the end on a cutting and heading machine which stands near by. Click! A piece the required length is cut off, with the same ease that a good blade would pass through a bar of soap, passes in between revolving hammers, the action of which are partly hidden from sight, and drops out, headed, on a shovel, from whence it is passed to a tram-way, down which it descends to a bed that turns it into a horizontal position; then it is seized by fingers or nippers, acting precisely like the fore-finger and thumb, lifted across into a clamp that, holding the head firmly, advances it between revolving grooved hammers, which round it to the required thickness, when it is dropped into a scoop and suffered to cool. This finger or nipper-device is one of the most interesting features, from the precision of its automatic action. The great difficulty of "handling" heated bodies of irregular size has been successfully overcome by Mr. WARD. When cooled, the end of the bolt is cniseled off, and then passed to the "threading" machine, where a lad in attendance drops it into a clamp, by which the end is presented to a revolving die, that forms the thread and drops the screws complete, at the rate of a thousand per hour. The process of forming the nuts is somewhat similar. A flat bar, brought to white heat, is placed in the cutting and punching machine—the chisel being adjusted immediately behind the punch—and click! click! each motion of the machine punches and cuts off a nut, which drops down and is permitted to cool. They are then removed to a threading machine, and passed upon a revolving spiral rod, which forms the thread, then cleaned and packed. In the case of rods used for bracing timbers, uniting the tops and bottoms of stoves, &c., as they are liable to become crooked in forming the head and screw, they have to undergo the further process of straightening, which is done by the "bull dog" of the establishment. The head of the rod being placed in position, the "dog" advances along a tram-way, with iron jaws, and snap! the rod is drawn through revolving cylinders that make it straight as an arrow. Over one hundred men and boys are employed here, who chiefly reside in cottages in the neighborhood, and as I remained in conversation with Mr. WARD until after the hour of leaving work, I had, on my return, the pleasure of recognizing many of the "hands," either sporting with their little ones on the porch or out cultivating their garden plots. How much happier and healthier than their brother sons of toil, who but exchange the vitiated air of the factory for the pent up quarters and stifling atmosphere of a Fourth-Ward tenement house! I hope, in successive Summer rambles, to find more of our factories transplanted to the country.

THE MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILROAD DISASTER—VERDICT OF THE CORONER'S JURY.—From the South Bend Register we extract the following, which is an abstract from the verdict of the Coroner's Jury, held at Mishawauka:

"That they are of opinion that the embankment and culvert at the place were well and substantially built; but that the culvert was not of sufficient size and capacity to carry off the water safely in time of a flood, and liable to be obstructed by drift wood, rails, trees, &c. That said culvert was four and a half feet wide and six and a half feet high, and should have been as large again. The jury further upon their oaths say that the foreman, DENNIS KANE, was guilty of wilful neglect of duty in not examining the track on and over the embankment, after the storm on the night before the time for the arrival of the train, in accordance with the instructions of the managers of the road." The inquest lasted five days.

LAW REPORTS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Clerke.

The Long Island Ferry Company vs. The Brooklyn Ferry Company.—This was a question on the part of the plaintiffs, by Mr. O'CONOR, their counsel, for an injunction against the defendants, to restrain them from running ferry-boats between this City and Williamsburgh in competition with the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs claim the sole right to all ferry privileges between this City and that place, under a lease from the City of New York by its Comptroller. It will be remembered that a few days since the plaintiffs were joined with the City in an action against the same defendants for the same cause of action. Mr. O'CONOR in making his motion, stated that the City had no interest in the present suit, and that while the Executive and Law Department of the City appeared to take an interest and assume responsibilities in the former cases, still the Legislative branch, was taking an active part against the plaintiffs by passing resolutions in favor of the very portions against whom the City brought their action. Seeing such the case, they had brought the present suit independently.

The motion was opposed on the ground that the plaintiff had already begun an action for the same cause. Counsel stated that the plaintiffs finding themselves defeated in the former suit with the City, now desired another trial of the case. The final hearing was put over to Monday next.

Wm. D. Berrien et al. vs. George W. Martin et al.—Order settled.

Joseph G. Powers vs. Mary Munger—Motion denied, with $5 costs.

George B. Clements vs. Daniel K. Reade—Motion denied, with $10 costs.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM.

Philip Duffy vs. New-York and Harlem Railroad Company.—HILTON, J.—The plaintiff brought this action to recover the value of a horse belonging to him, and which was run over and killed by the engine or cars of the defendants on their rail track in Fordham, Westchester County.

It appeared that the plaintiff hired pasturage for the horse upon a lot belonging to Mrs. Bassford, adjoining the strip of land on which the defendants' track was laid. That the horse was turned into this pasture lot on the morning of Sept. 3, 1857, and the partition fence next the rail track being insufficient and defective, the horse strayed through it and on the track of the defendants, and was thus killed.

It was claimed by the defendants that it was negligent to put a horse in the lot referred to, the fences being in a defective condition; and a dismissal of the complaint was asked on that ground, but was denied by the Justice.

The defendants then produced in evidence a deed from Bassford and wife to them of the strip of land adjoining the pasture lot dated Jan. 20, 1851, and recorded in the clerk's office of Westchester County July 22, 1843, containing a covenant on the part of Bassford for himself, his heirs, executors and Administrators, to erect upon the easterly and westerly lines of said strip, good, lawful, and sufficient fences to inclose the same, and at his and their own cost, and charge, maintain and keep the same in good repair for the term of eighteen years, or until the expiration of the defendant's charter.

The Justice gave judgment for the plaintiff for the value of the horse, and the defendants appeal.

In Comin vs. The New-York and Erie Railroad Company, (3 Kernan, 42,) it was determined that the general duty of erecting and maintaining fences on the sides of railroads is now imposed by Section 44 of the General Railroad act of 1850, (see laws 1850, p. 233,) upon all railroad companies, and until compliance on their part they and their agents are liable for all damages which shall be done by their agents, or injuries to cattle, horses or other animals thereon. That this duty was imposed, not only for the benefit and security of the public, but also for the benefit of the owners of cattle generally, and until such fences are erected, the statute excludes any defence of negligence on the part of an owner of cattle killed upon the track, in an action brought by such owner against the corporation to recover damages for the injury resulting from such killing.

And it is entirely immaterial whether such cattle enter lawfully or unlawfully upon the premises adjoining the railroad and stray from thence upon the track, provided it appears that the corporation have not erected and maintained the fences required by the statute. Although after the fences have been erected, there can be no recovery in such a case when the negligence or misconduct of the owner of the cattle injured contribute to the injury; or in other words, the common-law doctrine in respect to actions on the case for negligence then prevailing.

It may also be noticed, that in the case cited, the plaintiff's cattle strayed upon the land of one Gregory, and from thence upon the track of the defendants, and as it appeared that Gregory, like Bassford, in the present case, had conveyed the strip of land for the railroad track, and in the conveyance had covenanted to erect and maintain forever all necessary fences on each side of the railway, it was insisted that the plaintiff was bound by this covenant. But the Court (MASON, J.,) held that as the plantiff then was a stranger to the covenant, he could not be bound by it; adding, however, that if "Gregory's cattle had entered upon the road from his land, by reason of there being no fence, and been injured, his covenant would have been a good answer to the action," or in other words he would be estopped from recovering any damages resulting from a non-performance by him of his express covenant, and although the duty had been imposed by the statute upon the Corporation, yet he undertook to perform it, and as his performance of the covenant entered into by him would have satisfied the statute, he would not be permitted to recover for any injury resulting to himself and arising from his non-performance.

Thus, in the present case, had the horse in question belonged to Bassford it is quite clear he would not be entitled to recover in an action like this, and the only question therefore to be determined by us is whether the plaintiffs stand in any different position with respect to an injury of this character than his landlord.

It has long been settled law that a covenant to maintain partition fences between lands granted and other land of the grantor runs with the land and binds and affects all persons claiming or occupying the lands under the party making the covenant. 2 Hilliard, Abridgment, sec. 48, p. 375; Platt on Covenants, (3 Law Lib.) 481; Beddoe vs. Wadsworth, 21 Wend. 120; 4 Kent's Com., 472, and note; Spencer's case, 5 Rep., 16; Bally vs. Mills, 3 Wilson, 25; Norman vs. Wells, 17 Wend., 136.

In the language of Chief Justice Wilmot in Bally vs. Wells, supra., as reported in his Opinions, p. 341: "Covenants which run and vest with the land, lie for or against assignees at the common law, though not named. They stick so fast to the thing on which they nail that they follow every particle of it." And therefore it is that although a party may have a mere occupation of the land for a particular purpose, and which may be said to be a species of title, though of a very low order, (2 Black. Com., 195,) yet it is in subordination to and affected by the covenant of the landlord. And although he may not be bound to perform the covenant as heir or assignee, yet it would operate as an estoppel against him in all cases in which the landlord would be estopped by reason of it.

In Spencer's case, supra, distinction was taken between a covenant to erect a wall upon the devised premises, and in which the assigns of the lessor were not named, and a covenant to maintain a wall already erected, and it was held that the assignor in that case, (which was of the class first named,) was not bound because the thing in respect to which the covenant was made was not in issue, and had not at the time of making the covenant been a part of the land. It was only contemplated; although if was agreed by the judges that because it was a thing which would directly effect the devised premises, if the word assigns has been used, the covenant would have bound the assignee; but it could not be extended to him without his being named in it, as the subject matter of it did not relate to a thing in existence at the time of the devise. (Grey vs. Cuthbertson, 2 Chitty, R. 482.)

But this nice distinction, originating at a time when it was necessary to use the word "heirs," or other words of inheritance in a conveyance, in order to grant or carry an estate in fee, cannot be now said to exist, as in Norman vs. Wells, Supra, p 148, it was determined that those covenants run with the land, which are made touching or concerning it, and affect its value, and are not confined to those which respect some physical act or omission upon it.

It is unnecessary, however, to pursue this subject, as it will not be pretended that the estoppel which arises in this case grows out of the plaintiff's liability to perform the covenant of Bassford.

It is sufficient that his occupation was under Bassford, and in subordination to covenants contained in a deed duly recorded long previous to his entering upon the premises. He could acquire no greater rights in respect to their occupation than his landlord had to confer, and he is estopped in an action of this nature to the same extent as Bassford would have been had he been plaintiff.

The covenant was one that runs with the land, and not only affected every particle of it, but every occupation was subject to it, even though the occupant was under no obligation to perform it.

The judgment should be reversed.

DALY, F. J.—Without inquiring whether an agreement to pay so much per month for the privilege of pasturing his mare on Bassford's lot, others pasturing their horses there at the same time upon the same terms, was such an estate, possession or right in the land as to bind Duffy to the performance of covenants running with it—a point upon which I give no opinion—I think that the putting of his mare to pasture upon a lot adjoining a railroad track, the fence between which and the track was in a defective condition, was an act of carelessness on his part that materially contributed to the injury, and deprived him of all right of action against the defendants.

Charles J. Macdonald vs. Cornelius K. Garrison and Charles Morgan—DALY, F. J.—The statute declares that the Judge shall take the deposition; that it shall be carefully read to, and subscribed by, the witness; and that it shall be certified by the officer taking the same. The amendment of 1851 further provides that, when an application is made for an order for the examination of the witness conditionally, the officer, instead of directing the examination to be had before him, may make an order requiring the adverse party to show cause why the examination should not be taken by a referee to be appointed by the officer. In this case, the order was made for the examination of the witness before me, at chambers, upon a day named, at which time the parties appeared, and the adverse party insisted that I should write down the examination of the witness myself, or else that I should appoint a Referee to take the testimony. To have written down the testimony would have obliged me to have devoted myself for several days to the matter, to the total exclusion of all the other Chamber and Special Term business, a large amount of which arises in this Court each day that must be immediately and at once disposed of, and not having in the first instance made an order for the defendant to show cause why the testimony of the witness should not be taken by a Referee, but an order requiring the adverse party to appear before me and attend the examination of the witness, I did not feel called upon when the parties and the witness were before me upon a proper order to delay the examination of the witness by their making an order to show cause why the examination should not be taken by a Referee, even if an order to that effect could then have been properly made, and I accordingly directed that the examination should be conducted according to the practice that has prevailed in this Court since this statute was enacted, which practice, as a judicial interpretation of the statute, has been sanctioned and approved by the Judges of the Court for a period now of thirty year. After, therefore, administering an oath to the witness to the effect that he would well and truly answer all such questions as should be put to him, I ordered that the direct examination of the witness should be written down by the plaintiff's attorney, and the cross-examination by the defendant's attorney, or that if the parties preferred it, I would appoint the Deputy Clerk of the Court or any other person they might select to act as my amanuensis and write down the testimony, but the defendant's attorney expressing no preference, but confining his objection to the point that I must write down the testimony myself, or else appoint a Referee to take it; I directed it to be written down in the manner above stated, and declared that if any difference occurred in the course of the examination either as to the propriety of the questions put, or as to the answers to be written down, or as to any inaccuracy in the writing down of any question or answer that the parties should refer to me, and that, when the direct and cross-examination was fully written down, that I would carefully read the deposition to the witness before it was subscribed by him, and certified by me, as the officer taking it. The examination of the witness was accordingly so conducted, the counsel for the parties respectively writing down both question and answer.

Total number of live animals of all kinds received during the past week at the New-York City yards, 19,348. Total number received the previous week, 17,950; an increase of 1,398.

Of the 4,099 fresh bullocks, 3,070 were yarded at the Forty fourth-street yards. The balance were distributed: 836 sold at Bergen; 77 at BROWNING'S, and 29 at O'BRIEN'S on Sixth-street; and 87 at CHAMBERLAIN'S, on Robinson-street. The sales at Bergen are quite large this week, owing in part to the greater number landing at that point. Of the 3 070 bullocks at the Forty-fourth-street yards the present week, so far as we could ascertain from the owners or salesmen, and from the yard-book, there came from Illinois, 850; from Kentucky, 230; from New-York State, 402; from Ohio, 1 013 from Iowa, 143; from Canada, 62; from Indiana, 244; from Michigan, 39; from New-Jersey, 13; and from Missouri, 174. The receipts from Ohio are comparatively large, and those from New-York small, there being few distillery cattle left in the latter State.

The above 3,070 cattle at ALLERTON'S came into market by the following routes; by the Hudson River Railroad, 1,567; by Erie Railroad, 1,018; by Hudson River Boats, 406; Harlem Railroad, 14; and by Camden and Amboy Railroad, 75. The Erie Railroad is taking its full share of the cattle freight; the number of bullocks over that road must be near 2,000 this week, including the 1,018 at the Forty-fourth-street yards; 836 sold at Bergen, and those scattered in the other yards. The managers of this road will do well if they wish to continue and increase in favor with the cattle drivers, to provide them comfortable caboooses while accompanying their droves. They complain that twenty-five men were packed in a single caboose, with side seats only, and part of the space taken up with a stove, oil cans, etc. "Proper resentment" was shown on the part of the drovers, by unloading along the track the stove, cans, etc., which done, they think they could have passed a comfortable night if they could have secured a few bales of straw or hay for bedding. We saw the agent of the railroad, however, to-day, and he promises there shall be no cause of complaint hereafter.

THE CATTLE MARKET TO-DAY.

At the preliminary market on Tuesday little was done. With the large stock on hand this morning, and the hot weather in prospect, buyers had things pretty much their own way. Every possible concession was made by the sellers, both in prices and in estimating the net or dressed weights, but it was still difficult to work off any considerable lots at a time. The butchers from country towns and watering-places came in in larger numbers than usual. One lot of 36 was taken by a Providence dealer, and at least two car-loads for New-Haven. The early sales were about ½c. decline upon last week's rates, which sellers thought to be the worst they had seen, but before night a lower point was reached. Some lots went off at figures which the sellers preferred to keep private..... Taking the average of the entire transactions to day and yesterday, as we have noted them down, the range of prices this week, and those of last week, set down for comparing, are about as follows:

	To-day.	Last week.
Premium cattle.....	None.	None.
Best quality offered.....	10¾c.@10¾c.	10¾c. @11c.
Medium quality.....	9¾c.@ 9¾c.	9¾c. @ 10c.
Poor quality.....	8c. @ 8¾c.	8c. @ 9c.
Poorest quality.....	6c. @ 7c.	6½c.@ 8c.
General selling prices..	8½c.@10c.	9c. @10c.
Average of all sales...	8¾c.@ 9c.	9¾c.@——

Decline for the week ½c. ℔ lb.

The closing rates may be put at 1c. decline below last week's average. Above 500 head were without buyers at any price. The general quality of the cattle was no more than average, with too many thin, half-fed grass cattle from Iowa, Illinois and Ohio, From Albany, about 1,100 head went East, at 3c.@ 5¾c. ℔ lb., live weight.

H. MYERS was selling 79 very good Indiana cattle for MATHER & MORGAN, at 9c.@10¾c.—nothing over 10c.¾, to-day. They would dress about 7¾c.

W. C. BANE came in with 65 medium fleshed Illinois steers of about 6¾ cwt. These were bought at very low prices and were probably about the only lot which made a little money for the owner, who appeared quite satisfied with B. WESTHEIMER'S sales of them at 8c.@9¼c. ℔ lb. Mr. BANE expected a hard market, but his expectations were rather more than realized. WESTHEIMER also sold 51 Illinois stillers for RUPLE, at $58 each. Estimated 6½ cwt. And 32 very good Kentucky grade Durhams for D. ELBERT at $78 each. Albany live weight 1,425 lbs. A few brought $80@$85 each.

H. HUBD was trying to sell 68 young green Indiana steers, of 6¾ cwt., at 8c.@9¾c.—very few brought 10c. Mr. HURD only wished the owner, GEORGE VAN WAGENER, had them back on the Western Prairies.

MURRAY & GLOVER were nearly through with 97 of the Alexander cattle, a little better in quality than those on sale last week. Rated 7 cwt., and bringing 9c @ 10c.

W. H. HARRIS, for HARRIS & DONALD, 65 good retailing steers from CLARK County, Ohio, at 9¾c.@10c. Rated 7¾ cwt. They were a very fair, even bunch of straight steers, and were averaging close upon 10c. Also for S. MCKEE, 44 fairish, but light Indiana steers, of 6¾ cwt., at 8c @9½c.

J. WHEELER sold 84 of the good cattle to-day, for O. MCCONNELL. Rated 7¾ cwt. to 7½ cwt., and averaged about 10c.

H. WHITE & SON, for LAMB & SMITH, 108 slim Iowa hoppers, of 6¾ cwt., at 8c.@9c., and 35 better animals, from the same State, for GEO. WELLS, at 9c.@10c.

C. BARTRAM sold 96 Iowas for ALEXANDER & CASSEL at an average of 9c. They were rather rough, and weighed 1,480 lbs. at home.

A. HAMMOND was selling his own cattle, viz, 20 head of grass fed, thin steers of 5¾ cwt., from Wyoming County, N. Y. They were bringing 7c.@7¾c., with one two year old heifer at $52, or near 9c. ℔ lb.

C. G. TEED for J. BRYANT, a decent lot of 94 Ohio steers of 7 cwt.@7¼ cwt., at 9c.@10c.

C. W CONGER was selling 5 Illinois cattle for D. SALSON, at 8c.@10c. They would dress 7¾ cwt., but were not fat.

T. C. EASTMAN sold 96 cattle for TAYLOR & CO. at 9¾c.@10c.—the 10c. ones yesterday. They were good 7¼ cwt. steers from Champaign County Ohio.

S. ULERY was working on the Alexander cattle as usual. He had 10b head (more than he wanted in this market) of pretty fair Illinois steers, rated at 7¼ cwt, for which he was getting 8c.@10c.

I. BUDLONG, for J. C. ALLEN, 47 Canada stillers, well fed, at 9c.@10c; 36 of them were taken by Providence butchers at 8c. ℔ lb, Brighton rules, that is, reckoning the hide and fat as a fifth quarter. Also, for B. F. ATWATER, 39 little Michigan animals at $35@50 each, or 7c.@8c. ℔ lb.

MILCH COWS.

To say that the cow trade is very dull, and that those having fresh cows to sell had better dispose of them to some milk or dairyman in the country, will convey about the correct idea of the market. Beef is plenty and cheap, so that the swill stables (which buy the largest portion of fresh cows) find little market for their nearly dry or fat animals, and having a large stock they do not wish fresh cows. Again the customers of other than swill-fed milk have gone to the country, so that owners of these cows already have more milk than they want with the stock they now have. A very good cow, of ordinary stock, can be had for $40@$45.

VEAL CALVES.

These continue to come in quite in excess of the wants of buyers, so that it is hard work to dispose of them. As compared with the corresponding week last year, the receipts for the past week are 259 head more than they then were. The meat sells slowly, or spoils upon the stalls during the hot weather, so that buyers are little inclined to lay in a stock.

Good calves were selling to-day at 5c.@5½c. A few brought 6c., and a small number of the finest 6½c., while more sold under 4c. We noticed one large calf at BROWNING'S, weighing 315 lbs, 11 weeks old, which sold for $13. He was raised by I. PERRY, of Wayne County, New-York.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

Receipts have been large—11 555 for the past week—giving an over-supply, although the trade continues pretty good. ALLERTON gives 1,053 for the past week, which is more than have been at this market during a single week for some months. Large numbers were in the pens to-day—more than could be sold, even at a decline of 20c. ℔ head. Good animals would bring about 5c. ℔ lb., live weight, and so down to 3c.

O'BRIEN gives the receipts as follows:

From Ohio, 83, by Baker & Turner; and 80 by M. McCulliff. From New-York, 98 by J. Vanbuskirk; 120 by T. Mahoney & Co.; 189 by J. Fowler & Co.; 154 by S. Wheaton; 201 by R. McGraw; 55 by J Sweet; 203 by N. Spencer; 119 by J. Bullira, and 185 by A. Marshall.

Sales are reported by O'BRIEN & MCGRAW of

709 sheep at.....	$2,596 62
216 lambs at.....	874 00
472 sheep and lambs.....	1,543 81
1,397.....	$5,014 43

CHAMBERLAIN reports 4,984 head selling at $2@$5 for common to good, and $6@$7 each for extras.

BROWNING'S receipts at his Sixth-street Market for the past week were 4,081 head. Of these 1 916 were from New-York. Brought in, 204 by H. Todd; 74 by R Smith; 196 by J. Steele; 99 by Maine & Satterly; 35 by L. Miller; 97 by R. McGrath; 51 by D. Sweet; 198 by H. Simmons; 101 by J. J Plattner; 41 by H Purdy; 233 by D. Poucher; 136 by P. Kilmer; 111 by E. Rowe; 110 by B. Getman; 199 by W. Hicks; 31 by J. Fink, Jr. From Ohio, 47 by H. Todd; 299 by C. Baker; 200 by R. H. Hume; 194 by J. Simmons; 304 by Thompson & Tremble. From New Jersey, 286 by G. B. Holcomb; 132 by A. Robbins; 35 by B. Lawrence; 63 by W. B. Bellis; 100 by L. Bellis; 26 J. Perrin; 65 by R. Bellis. From Indiana, 199 by T. Hassbury. From Michigan, 105 by J. B. Sheppard.

R. H. HUME sold:

A fair lot of 85 State lambs, brought in by H. TODD, sold for $4 03 each. A few hundred store sheep sold for less than $2 ℔ head,

THOS. C. LARKIN reports sales of 1,361 sheep and lambs for $5,037 91, in the following lots:

74 lambs.....	$366 75	99 sheep.....	$353 57
99 lambs.....	378 00	203 sheep.....	707 83
50 lambs.....	245 00	392 sheep.....	1,183 13
111 lambs.....	464 13	176 sheep.....	724 00
25 lambs.....	126 00	97 sheep and lambs,	387 50

SWINE.

Receipts moderate and prices a trifle higher than last week, ranging at 6½c @6¾c. for corn-fed, and 6¼c.@6¾c. for still-hogs. HUGHES & FARRAH give 1,440 as their fresh receipts, and 116 left over last week, making 1,556 head. Of these, 860 were sent to Fortieth-street, and the balance, 694, sold. At the Western, or Fortieth-street yards, the receipts, independent of those sent from below, were 1,221, all of which are reported sold, so that a clean market is open for fresh arrivals.

Albany Live Stock Market.

WEST ALBANY, N. Y., Monday, July 18, 1859.

The following statement shows the receipts of live stock via the New-York Central Road:

	This week.	Last week.	Total since Jan. 1.
Cattle.....	3,104	3 152	67 018
Sheep.....	3,095	3 045	85 400
Hogs.....	150	——	16 070
	Corn'g w'k last year.	Av. weekly re'ts last year.	Total to same date last year.
Cattle.....	2,464	2 536	68 403
Sheep.....	696	3 127	72 146
Hogs.....	570	3 747	116 229

CATTLE—The receipts are again heavy, and the market is exceedingly dull. The arrivals by railroad, as will be noticed above, amounting to 3,100 head, to which must be added 200 held over from last week, and 100 driven in on foot, making a total of 3,400. This is more than the market needs at this season of the year, and holders are discouraged at the prospects of this week's market and say they are willing to concede ½c. ℔ lb decline (live weight) from last week's prices, and cannot find purchasers at that. The New Yorkers were here in their usual numbers, but we do not hear of a single "bunch" being sold for that City. The market closes, however, with a better prospect for the holders who take their stock down the river, as the Eastern folks take about 1,200 head; this, with say 300 retailed here, 200 to be held over, will leave only 1,700 for New-York, which ought not overstock that place on Wednesday next, unless the other avenues pour in more than their usual quantity.

The Cattle were received from the several States, as follows: Ohio, 853; Kentucky, 849; New York, 765; Illinois, 393; Indiana, 288; Canada, 133; Michigan, 119; and were distributed at the different yards.

FREIGHTS remain unchanged. We hear there is some opposition from some of the Western points to Buffalo, but this is only hearsay. From Buffalo Cattle are shipped at $85 ℔ car to New-York, and $100 ℔ car to Providence and Brighton, or $75 to Albany. From Albany to New-York $10 ℔ car by Hudson River Railroad or 50 cents ℔ head on Propellers. The Propellers take down about 650 head this week. We quote prices this week:

Superior.....	5 @5½
First quality.....	4½ @5
Second quality.....	3½ @4
Third quality.....	3 @3½
Inferior quality.....	2½@3

There are a few very good droves which may be classed as superior, but we cannot hear of any selling at higher than 5½c., while some thin ones have been sold less than 3c. We think, therefore, our quotations cover all classes.

SHEEP AND LAMBS—These are in fair demand. The quality this week is not as good as last, and we think prices have gone down 25c. ℔ head since our last quotations. The Albany buyers have not yet fairly entered the market. They will probably do so in about two weeks.

Hogs—There have been only two small lots received this week; they were not sold here. We quote fat, at 5c. @6c., and perhaps 6¼c. could be obtained for an extra drove.

Philadelphia Live Stock Market.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, July 18.

Dullness was supreme at the cattle-yard today, and everything partook of a lazy character. The stock in market was large, but the hot weather has kept back the butchers, while it rendered the drovers, even those who usually manifest the greatest desire to realize, indifferent about making sales. Prices have therefore declined. It is probable that the downward tendency commenced to-day will continue several weeks. The offerings at both yards amount to about 1,200 head.

The following was the range of prices for beef cattle to-day:

Choice quality (℔ 100 lbs.).....	$10 00 to 10 50
Prime " "	9 00 to 9 50
Fair " "	8 50 to 8 75
Ordinary " "	8 00 to 9 00
Common " "	7 87 to 8 00
Inferior " "	4 87 to 5 87

The offerings of sheep amounted to 4,000 head. The sales were effected at 4c.@4¾c. ℔ lb. gross, a decline of $1 50 ℔ 100 lbs.

The cow market continues dull. The offerings at MARTIN'S amounted to 150 head, which were sold at the following rates:

First quality Milch Cows, each.....	$40@$45
Second quality Milch Cows, each.....	30 @ 40
Third quality Milch Cows, each.....	28@ 30
Ordinary quality Milch Cows, each.....	25@ 28
Dry quality Milch Cows, each.....	15 @ 25

The arrivals of hogs at IMHOFF'S Union Drove-yard amount to 1,450 head, which sold at prices ranging from $7 50 to $8 75 ℔ 100 lbs., net.

WHOLESALE PRODUCE MARKETS.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, July 20, 1859.

Commission Sales of Produce for the week ending July 20, 1859, prepared for THE NEW-YORK TIMES by PINNEY & JOHNSON, Produce Commission Merchants, No. 231 Fulton-street. Our quotations are such as merchants and producers realize who ship their Produce to this market to be sold on commission.

BUTTER.

The market is quite destitute of fine Butter, and Orange County pails advanced 2c. ℔ lb. on Saturday last, thereby imparting a decidedly better feeling in the better graces of Ohio and State. If by taking advantage of a cool spell Butter can be got here in good order, we consider the present a very favorable moment to hurry it forward—particularly fine Butter. We advance our quotations.

THE GREAT BATTLE-FIELD.

The extremely accurate and minute map of the field of Solferino, which was given in our Daily issue of Wednesday, and which affords the most perfect idea of the course and details of that tremendous conflict, will be republished at 10 o'clock this morning in the WEEKLY TIMES, and will be repeated in the SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, at the same hour to-morrow.

Price of each in a wrapper, FOUR CENTS.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Royal Mail Steamship Africa, now in her twelfth day from Liverpool, with two days later European advices, is fully due. Nothing had been seen of her at Sandy Hook at 2 o'clock this morning.

News from the Pacific coast, six days later than steamer advices, reach us by the Overland Mail. The general features of the news have already been indicated in our telegraphic dispatches. Some extracts from our files are given in this morning's TIMES. In California the political aspirations of Governor WELLER have been defeated by the nomination of M. S. LATHAM for Governor, by the Buchanan wing of the Democracy.

Later news from Arizona announces the renomination of Lieut. MOWRY for the post of Territorial Delegate in Congress. Gen. PESQUERA had arrived from Mazatlan. Our correspondent at Tubac notices renewed outrages by the Mexicans, and narrates the particulars of a terribly severe punishment inflicted upon a deserter from the United States forces on duty in the Territory.

The Sunday question in Philadelphia assumes a new aspect. The car-driver arrested last Sunday has been committed to prison to await his trial for a breach of the peace, having refused to give bail for his appearance by advice of counsel. A writ of habeas corpus is to be sued out, and the case taken at once to the Supreme Court of the State for decision on the legal points involved in the pending controversy.

The Commencement exercises at the Harvard College at Cambridge, Mass., took place yesterday, and were witnessed by an unusually large assemblage. The Governor, Executive Council, etc., were present, and with EDWARD EVERETT, Prof. SPARKS, and other prominent persons, occupied seats upon the platform. The exercises gave general satisfaction. One hundred and twenty applicants were accepted for the new term.

In the great India-Rubber case, lately tried before the Supreme Court in Baltimore, to decide the question of the right to the exclusive manufacture and sale of vulcanized rubber goods, Judge GILES yesterday delivered his opinion deciding in favor of Mr. HORACE H. DAY, and a perpetual injunction was granted against other parties. Some fifteen other suits were depending upon the issue of this, in all of which injunctions will issue.

The Weekly Report of the Commissioners of Emigration states, that 1,892 emigrants arrived during the past week, making a total thus far on the year of 44,670 against 42,868 to the same date in 1858. The balance of the Commutation Fund on hand is $20,849 77. Dr. JEROME sent in a communication stating that the large accession of patients which he expected to receive at the Floating Hospital, since he understood that the Health Officers, as well as the Board of Health, intended to send there the class of patients heretofore sent to the Marine Hospital, made it necessary that an assistant should be appointed, who should remain at the Floating Hospital. He nominated Dr. C. D. ROBINSON, of Hornellsville, as a suitable candidate. The Commissioners referred the matter to the President and Council of the Board, as they did not desire to assume any responsibility in the premises. Mr. KENNEDY sent in a statement relative to the arms furnished the policemen by the New-Haven Arms Company during the Quarantine War. It was referred to a Special Committee. Resolutions complimentary to Capt. PILSBURY, late Superintendent of Wards Island, were adopted.

A party of the personal and political friends of Justice JAMES H. WELSH, yesterday accompanied him down the bay on his departure for Europe on board the steamer Asia. They met, to the number of about 200, at PATTEN'S Hotel, where, after partaking of a breakfast, they escorted him to the steamer in which he was to embark, and then made an excursion down the bay to Sandy Hook on board the steamboat James A. Stevens, giving him a parting cheer when the pilot left the ship. It is understood that Justice WELSH intends being absent about three months, and that he designs making himself familiar with the Police of Paris and London. During his absence Judge WELSH'S place will be filled in rotation by his brethren of the Police Courts.

The Live Stock Yards continue overstocked. The arrivals of beef cattle at yesterday's general market, and for the week past numbered 4,099, to which must be added about 400 unsold on the last market day. This makes a total of 4,400, against 3,676 as the weekly average for all of last year, while the demand is at its lowest limit, owing to the comparatively small number of consumers, residents and others now in the City. An unusual number of out-of-town buyers chanced to be present yesterday, which helped out the sales somewhat, yet there were near 500 bullocks unsold last evening. Prices declined ½c. per pound on the estimated dressed weight upon the low rates of the previous market, and the closing sales were at a still greater decline....Milch Cows—Receipts for week, 195—just equal to last year's average. The demand is next to nothing, and prices just what the few buyers are disposed to offer....Veal Calves—Receipts for week 838, which is more than found purchasers, even after a little concession in prices....Sheep and Lambs—Receipts for week 11,555. Selling rates a little lower, and a fair supply on hand....Swine—Receipts for week 2,661; demand moderate; prices a shade better.

Cotton was in fair demand yesterday, with sales of 1,800 bales, at strengthening prices. Flour and Wheat were depressed and lower. Corn was also dull and heavy. Provisions attracted less attention. Pork was cheaper. Sugar and Molasses were in good request. Coffee was quiet. Spirits Turpentine and desirable lots of Resin were salable and firm. The movements in other branches of trade were restricted. There were 613 vessels of all classes in port.

AN OFFENSIVE REELECTION UPON THE INSTITUTIONS OF THE SOUTH.—The Mobile Register, in its advocacy of the Slave-trade, has manifestly enlisted for the campaign, nailed its colors to the mast, and, generally, performed all those impressive feats which are held to indicate unalterable determination. It follows up the subject from day to day, explaining and expounding with laborious earnestness the alleged advantages of importing slaves from Africa, doubtless to the great edification of the planting interest. But its chief argument in favor of repealing the Federal statutes is based upon the assumption that "they contain an offensive reflection upon the institutions of the South." Naturally enough, the Register says to itself, if the Slave-trade is felony and piracy, what must slaveholding be? And the necessary answer to that simple interrogatory shocks its innocent heart. Accordingly it calls upon its brethren to repel the disagreeable imputation, and to redeem their character as a people—not, indeed, as might seem most proper to unsophisticated Northern souls, by washing utterly from their skirts the stain of Slavery. No, indeed. It advises them, instead, to conceal its blackness by covering themselves all over with the atrocities of the African Slave-trade. The sensitive South, forsooth, cannot bear the reflection upon its character which the Federal statutes imply; but shrinks not from facing the scorn of Christendom. It requires only to be consoled by an abundance of cheap negroes.

The Mobile Register altogether omits to inform its readers how it is that the South has so long rested quietly under what is now discovered to be an offensive reflection. It is many years since the statutes complained of were enacted. They were passed by the aid of the South itself in Congress—no voice from that quarter, more than from the Free States, being raised against them. Will it be claimed that the Stephenses, the Yanceys and the Forsyths of the present are more jealous of Southern honor than were the men who represented the South when the African Slave-trade was prohibited?

The truth is that the real and actual motive for the present Slave-trade movement is the love of money. Fifteen hundred dollars for a field hand is a high price to pay. Black men can be got cheaper from Africa than from Virginia. It is the cost of slaves, and not any implied censure of Slavery in the Federal statutes, which disturbs the mental peace of the chivalry. The South has caught a glimpse of a great commercial enterprise, and it intends to embark therein from pure love of money.

The Palmerston Ministry.

As we have already said, the British Cabinet constituted under Lord PALMERSTON is perhaps the most brilliant which has reigned in England since the celebrated coalition of Lord NORTH with Fox. That of Lord ABERDEEN in 1852 embraced two powerful sections, the Whigs and Peelites, the latter compensating for their poverty of numbers by their wealth of administrative ability. The present Cabinet comprises three sections, the Whigs, Peelites and Manchester school, besides Lord ELGIN, who may be considered a statesman unattached. The administrative strength of the Government is in fact its greatest political weakness.

Of Lord PALMERSTON, the Premier, it is almost needless to speak. Few foreigners have ever so much as glanced through the doorway of the British House of Commons without carrying away a mental daguerreotype of his fashion and his face. True as the dial to the sun, the veteran Viscount may be seen each day as the hour of assembling nears, marching down St. James' Park and Whitehall Gardens with a vigor and gayety of stride that would become the boldest boxer in England. Though seventy-five years old, he retains all the buoyancy and vivacity of youth, and with his gallant air and graceful dash of dandyism, looks a sort of masculine Ninon de l'Enclos. He is said to possess that capacity of throwing off dull care, and that freedom from stupefying principles which make up the secret of inexhaustible political faith. His chief popularity with the masses is derived from their stout faith in his undaunted English pluck. This is a quality of immense value with a nation so stout and daring as England always has been, is and always will be. As was said of another great English politician,

"Even at the feast his pluck pervades the board,
And dauntless game-cocks symbolize their Lord."

Every village ale-house echoes the belief that the Premier "Pam" eats nothing but good Southdown mutton, and drinks nothing but good English beer; and as he canters along Rotten-row or down Piccadilly there is something pleasant in the pride with which each passer turns and says, "There goes our Pam." At home he is the delight and stay of the social circle.

"Nor gout nor toil his freshness can destroy,
But time still leaves all Eton in the boy."

In the conduct of his administrative department he is despotic and severe, and cannot brook for a moment the smallest contradiction or control. He is troubled with one or two singular prejudices. For instance, he will not permit smoking in any portion of his office, or allow any officer of his department to write with a steel pen. As a speaker he is, except on rare occasions, clumsy and confused in the construction of his sentences, and hesitating and "haw-haw-y" in their delivery; and few who listened to him for the first time would believe that this was the statesman who claimed for every Englishman the defensive glory of the old Roman "Civis Romanus Sum." Lord PALMERSTON has no legal offspring. His wife retains all the charm of physical and spiritual juvenility which belongs to her lord, and is said by her grace of manners and fascinating finesse, to be no mean adjunct to her husband's success.

Next, cool and all unconscious of reproach, "comes the calm Johnny," who upset the coach. After upsetting various Governments and finally upsetting himself, Lord JOHN RUSSELL, now at the age of sixty-seven, finds himself once more on his feet, and installed in the all-important position of Foreign Secretary. In his personal relations with his party, Lord JOHN is cold and unsympathetic. His fame would fire, but that his manners freeze his followers; and there are few even of those with whom he has been politically associated for years, with whom he is on terms of unconstrained intimacy. He is devotedly attached to his children, with whom he may be often seen playing in the gardens of his beautiful cottage at Richmond, which was once the residence of GEORGE CANNING, and which was assigned to Lord JOHN when Premier by the present Queen as a life gift; and seldom receives a deputation at his private residence in town without having one or two of these children by his shoulders or by his side. Lord JOHN ranks but in the second class as a debater, but from the position he has held, and his long experience as a statesman, is listened to with an attention and deference which his dreary and drawling delivery could never of itself command. As an administrator, he is able and laborious, and won large laurels some years since by his enlightened direction of the Colonial Department.

Next in position in the Cabinet, though first in position, both as an administrator and debater, comes Mr. W. G. GLADSTONE, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Slight in figure, but of keen, nervous temperament, Mr. GLADSTONE at once strikes the observer by the eager expression of his countenance, the piercing glance of his dark eyes, and the thoughtful, almost Jesuitical character of his head. Thoroughly master of every subject of politics and finance, and with an exuberant command of diction, that enables him to display his mental resources with kaleidoscopic variety and matchless exuberance of illustration, he is universally acknowledged the ablest member of the Commons House of Parliament. His speech, some six years since, against his present Premier, delivered in the celebrated Don Pacifico debate, was pronounced, by the ablest judges, the finest Parliamentary effort heard within the present century in the House. In private Mr. GLADSTONE unites to the most delightful buoyancy and playfulness of spirit, an unselfish nobleness of nature and affectionate gentleness that render him beloved, not only in his own home and social circle, but by by every attaché, down to the lowest dependant of every office over which he has presided. No amount of work appears to weary him, and amid the cares and troubles which belong to the control of a great Department of State, he has always found time for the cultivation of those classic tastes which crowned him with the favor of that Alma Mater, whose sore ingratitude he has just been obliged to face. This weakness lies in the delicacy and fastidiousness of his intellectual organization, which is hardly fitted for the rough-and-tumble encounters of political life.

Lord ELGIN, the new Postmaster-General, had little weight of mere family connections to recommend him to his present position as a Cabinet Minister, and was undistinguished as Lord BRUCE, in the House of Commons. He has won his spurs as a Cabinet Minister chiefly by his Canadian Administration, and his conduct of the recent Chinese Treaty. He has shown himself a humorous and effective after-dinner speaker, but has had no opportunity of making any impression as yet in the House of Lords. He has yet to prove himself in his new sphere entitled to that high destiny to which he is said to aspire, and which his friends eagerly predict for him as the "coming man."

The only other member of the new Cabinet of any special note at this moment is Mr. MILNER GIBSON, whose position as the representative of the Manchester section gives him considerable weight. Mr. GIBSON, then Mr. MILNER, commenced life as a high Tory, and was first introduced to Parliament in that interest as member for Ipswich, but having altered, on reflection, his political views, he was returned a member for Manchester in conjunction with Mr. BRIGHT. On the triumph of Free-trade principles, in 1846, he accepted office as Vice-President of the Board of Trade, under the Government of Lord JOHN RUSSELL, but owing to the sluggish tendencies of his colleagues, was in a few months obliged to resign his post. As a speaker he is graceful and fluent, rather than strong, but has a handsome presence and high-bred air which always commands for him a certain consideration. His Pro-Italian tendencies, like those of nearly all the present Cabinet, are strong, and his house in Wilton-Crescent has long been the favorite resort on Sunday evenings of all the distinguished foreigners whom misfortune or tyranny have driven to seek an asylum in England. His wife, by whom he acquired a large fortune, was even accused some Summers since of having secretly conveyed and disseminated through Italy the manifestoes of MAZZINI. The charge was doubtless unfounded, but its currency proves how strongly the tide of the Gibsonian sympathies sets in what we, on this side of the Atlantic, believe to be the right direction.

Solferino and its Consequences.

The battle of Solferino was fought on the 24th of June. Within a week after this decisive action, the Emperor of the French was moving the main body of his army directly against the real heart of the Austrian stronghold in Italy, and the demoralized Austrian army was manœuvring on a line of retreat towards the river Adige.

The fortress of Peschiera, reared with infinite pains and at great expense to protect the passage of the Mincio by commanding those floodgates of the Lago di Garda by means of which the quiet stream of the Virgilian River might in a few hours be turned into a raging and destroying torrent, had been virtually annulled, within the same brief time, by the rapid advance of the Sardinian army, and the appearance on the lake of an unexpected fleet of French gunboats. The engineers of the Austrian quadrilateral omitted the element of steam from their elaborate calculations of the defensive measures necessary to make their position the impregnable eyrie of Italian despotism. NAPOLEON III. is reading them a lesson in the art of fortification by which he will hardly allow them at once to profit. The fall of Peschiera will probably demonstrate to the staff of FRANCIS JOSEPH precisely what it was that Peschiera needed to make her lines as formidable as their fame.

These fruits of a week's growth should of themselves suffice to prove how terribly definite was the victory won by the Allies on the 24th of June. It has been idly enough maintained by partisan journals devoted to Austria, that the triumph of that day was rendered dubious by the failure of the French to pursue the retreating enemy. But it need only be remembered that the defeat of Solferino was the defeat of an army established in strong positions of its own choice, and that the conflict after lasting through sixteen hot and wasting hours of the Summer day was interrupted after nightfall by a tremendous tempest of wind and rain, to make this feature of the strife perfectly intelligible. The Austrians committed the mad mistake of fighting with a river in their rear, it is true, and had the night allowed the French to follow them closely up, they must have been driven either into a surrender or the Mincio. But they had also worn their antagonists out by a day of desperate engagements, and then simple retreat, in the circumstances, was a moral rout which scarcely needed to be made more significant by a material annihilation. This was proved by their subsequent utter failure to resist the entrance of the Allies within their famous square. The battle of Castiglione, which gave up the Mincio to the French under SERRURIER, MASSENA, and AUGEREAU, in 1796, was not a more complete victory, in this sense, than the victory of Solferino. Then, as now, the Austrians were driven beyond the Mincio, and were immediately followed, without any resistance of importance, by their conquerors. Then, as now, the victorious French found themselves set at liberty by their triumph to isolate Mantua on their right by a small army of observation, and to press forward with the whole force of their centre upon Verona. In 1848, as Col. CHAROLAS has shown, CHARLES ALBERT might also have succeeded in neutralizing the value of the historic square, after his victory at Peschiera, had he not forgotten that his army was inferior in numbers to that of RADETZKY, and that he had no means of holding the successive positions which he won during his continuous advance. The Allies of to-day suffer under no such disadvantages. For them, the absolute imprisonment of the Austrian army within the walls of Verona and of the entrenched camp which surrounds it, is an enterprise guaranteed not less by the numbers than by the splendid spirit of their army. NAPOLEON I. declared that Mantua was a post of purely contingent importance. "With a siege-train," said the first Emperor, "we shall take Mantua whenever we like in three weeks time." The siege-trains of the second Empire have more than kept pace in their development with the fortifications of Austrian Italy, and what was true of the relative strength of Mantua fifty years ago, is equally true of it to-day. The very position of the fortress makes the blockade of it by such a force as that of the Prince NAPOLEON the simplest of military operations.

Meanwhile, by clearing the whole country on a circuit of nearly ten miles from Peschiera and the Mincio of the Austrians, the battle of Solferino has immensely facilitated the development of the allied plans against Verona.

Almost up to the very banks of the Adige the French reconnaissances had been pushed at the latest advices; and if the Austrians should have offered battle to the Allies within ten days after the 24th of June, it is probable that they must have been forced to fight at a disadvantage in respect to position as well as under the depressing influence of their long career of defeat. Leaving Mantua apart as a point isolated by the French blockade, a French victory under the walls of Verona would throw the Austrian army back upon the lower valley of the Adige, the key of which is the fortified bridge-head of Legnago. A resolute assault on this place from the west, or a movement upon it from the Adriatic side, would open the passage of the Adige, and the road to Venice, to the French, as in the Winter of 1801, when the Republican armies drove the Austrians across the Adige, in two battles, and chased them to the walls of Treviso.

The actual state of the Italian campaign, as immediately affected by the battle of Solferino, may, therefore, be summed up by saying that the Austrians, who might have assumed the offensive very formidably along the line of the Mincio on the first of July, had they maintained the positions taken up by them before the 23d of June, found themselves reduced within a week after their senseless passage of that stream to the necessity of manœuvring in retreat towards the Adige, of covering as well as possible the roads which threaten the flank of their camp at Verona, and of abandoning altogether the notion of operating with Mantua as a base. In other words, their famous square had ceased to be a fortress for themselves, and had become a mere inclosed lists of combat in which the advantages of position leaned to the side of their enemy.

The Sickles Story.

The Honorable DANIEL E. SICKLES has addressed a letter to the public in relation to his private affairs, to which we give a place in our columns to-day.

When, in conformity with the best public sentiment of the land, and with the views advanced at the time by this journal, in common with all the leading organs of American opinion, a jury of honest and high-minded citizens of Washington had pronounced Mr. SICKLES, after a fair and honorable trial, to be innocent of the crime of murder, it was to have been expected that a decent regard for the proprieties of life, if no higher motive governed his actions, would have induced him to withdraw himself and his sad domestic story at once from the eye of the world. This Mr. SICKLES did. He, doubtless, felt himself, what we then echoed the judgment of the country in pronouncing him to be, not a hero to be commended, but a criminal to be forgiven. He had slain a fellow-creature in a fury of revenge; and though all respectable men held him excused for that slaying by the terrible provocation and shameful wrong which had moved him to it, yet it was altogether to be desired, in the interest of common morality and of the general welfare, that nothing more should be done or said to disturb the veil dropped by his acquittal over the portals of a violated and dishonored home. That veil Mr. SICKLES himself now deliberately lifts, and implores the sympathetic attention of the world to a new scene of passion enacted within the sacred walls.

The occasion for this extraordinary demonstration has been afforded by the comments which a portion of the Press have thought it worth their while to make upon a reported reconciliation of Mr. SICKLES with the woman whose conduct not half a year ago ennobled murder in his eyes, and made the Earth a planet too small for himself and the man whose paramour he had forced her to confess herself to be.

This reconciliation was first announced in a telegraphic message from Washington, which charged the friends of Mr. SICKLES with urging him back into the embrace of the wife whom he had repudiated and branded with such sanguinary emphasis. The reconciliation itself was, of course, and is, and will remain, the private affair of the parties concerned. But the honorable characters of the gentlemen who befriended Mr. SICKLES in the day of his deepest distress and peril made it proper that they should be relieved from the imputation of stultifying themselves and insulting the community, by indorsing Mr. SICKLES' open retraction of all the pleas on which his defence had been founded by himself and adopted by his friends. In their behalf, therefore, we at once contradicted the senseless story that any of them had been consulted at all in reference to a step which put them all for a moment in a false and intolerable position before the public.

This contradiction Mr. SICKLES himself now repeats. He states that his "reconciliation with his wife was his own act, done without consultation with any relative, connection, friend or adviser." In so far as this explicit statement goes, the letter of Mr. SICKLES has the interest which belongs to every vindication of honorable men from unfounded calumny. Further interest it has not, nor can have. While Mr. SICKLES stood upon trial for his life in the capacity of an injured husband, it was a matter of public importance that full justice should be done to him. He is now a free man—absolved from the legal stain of blood; the principle which he represented on his trial has been established, and his future is the future of a private citizen, who may govern his acts by his own standards of duty and decency, without interference by the public, so long as in these acts he abstains from crossing the path of the law and of public order. There will be much gossip excited, of course, both in public and in private, by this sudden appearance of the conjugal avenger in the character of a conjugal confessor. There will be fresh sympathies aroused for the dead man who moulders in his grave unforgiven, while the partner of his guilt smiles her gratitude up into the face of him whose mercy was so tardy while his justice was so swift. And men who have sounded but a few of those "depths of the human heart" with which Mr. SICKLES thinks himself familiar, may shrink with inexperienced horror from the contrast between the husband who laid the whole inner sanctuary of his home open to the public eye in February to save himself from a felon's doom, and the husband who flings aside in July the remonstrances of friends who were to him as a wall of fire in his troubles, with the indisputable assertion that "it is not usual to make our domestic life a subject of consultation with friends, no matter how near and dear to us." But these are consequences of his conduct and of his appeal to the public for which Mr. SICKLES can hardly be unprepared, and which concern himself far more nearly than any other human being. With them and him as journalists we have nothing more to do. As Mr. SICKLES has very justly said, "political station, professional success, social recognition, are not the only prizes of ambition;" and if, in resigning these, he has assured the peace of his own heart "as a husband and a father," public praise and public blame must be to him alike indifferent.

THE THIRD PARTY.—It is stated by the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser that the State Council of the American or Know-Nothing Party will meet in Geneva on the fourth Thursday (25th) of August. If we recollect aright it has been the practice of the Know-Nothings to hold an annual State Council, composed of one delegate from each local Council, and that the State Council has called the nominating State Convention. That course was pursued, we believe, so late as last year; and it is intimated by leading members of the party that the same policy is now to be followed.

As the Know-Nothings polled upwards of sixty thousand votes last Fall, the course which they may be inclined to take in the approaching campaign is not altogether without interest to political engineers and wire-pullers. Doubtless the leaning of the American voters is to a union with the Republicans. But so it was last year, and yet no union was effected. The effort and the failure can hardly be supposed to have contributed to a better state of feeling between the two parties—so that a junction in September, though possible enough, is not at all certain to happen. Probably we shall witness an exhibition of diplomacy on both sides. The general feeling of the Republicans is, however, unfavorable to concessions, as that party having carried their ticket last Fall without American help, feel able to do so again. All that they will probably require of the Know-Nothings is that they should run their own separate ticket. Besides, the Republicans look for a material falling off in the Know-Nothing strength, while the American leaders are anticipating an accession to their ranks, or at least profess to do so.

International Code of Marine Signals.

ROGERS' Marine Signals were favorably introduced to the notice of the public a few years ago by the Navy Department, Revenue Service and Lighthouse Establishment of the United States, as the "American Marine Signals." These signals have recently been taken up by the British Board of Trade, which was charged with the duty of reviewing the old Code, and they have authorized their introduction into "the new Commercial Code for the use of all nations," for the purpose of communicating intelligence between American, British and other foreign vessels. This code of signals has been prepared and published in accordance with the recommendation of a Committee appointed by the British Board of Trade, of which the late Admiral BEECHEY, of the Royal Navy, was Chairman. The number of flags required for the Commercial Code is eighteen, to which is added a pennant, adopted as a Code signal, in consequence of some of the flags being similar to those employed in other Codes now in use. The advantages of the Commercial Code are—its applicability for international purposes; its being so framed that while part 1, the Code for the use of nations is condensed, an enlarged Code for national vessels of any country adopting the Code, may be incorporated with the vocabulary and index, which forms Part II. of the Signal Book. Provision is made for calling the attention of any particular ship of a fleet whose name is unknown, and no new edition will impair the efficiency of the first one as far as it was useful when issued. The International Code can, by translation, be made a universal language of signals. The testimonials in favor of the new Code are very numerous and respectable. The Committee of Lloyds, the several Shipowners' Societies, and local Marine Boards in London, Liverpool, and the outports, have recommended the general use of the Commercial Code, while the Royal Navy, the East India Company, the principal Steam-packet Companies, and many others, have already adopted it as an established means of communication at sea. Under the new arrangements a special agreement has been made by the British Government with Lloyds agents, and with the Coast Guard stations on the coast of Great Britain, or wherever the American and British ensigns are displayed, to report the names of all vessels carrying the flags of the Commercial Code. The Lords Commissioners of the British Admiralty have also directed the Captains and Commanders of Her Majesty's ships to make periodical returns to the Board of Trade of the names of all vessels hoisting the signals of the Commercial Code. To enable captains of vessels carrying the old flags of MARRYAT and ROGERS to avail themselves of the benefits of the new code at as small an expense as possible, it is only necessary to provide four additional flags and a pennant to those of the Marryat code, by means of which every signal contained in the Commercial Code may be indicated. The British Board of Trade have recently published, as an appendage to this code, a list of their Mercantile Navy, giving the names, tonnage and port of registry of upwards of 40,000 British vessels, with appropriate signals, and to which ROGERS & Co. have added an American appendix, also with appropriate signals for each American vessel, so that by means of one hoist of four flags the name, tonnage and port of each vessel may be indicated. This will enable ships at sea to exchange their names, for the purpose of being reported by each other upon arrival at their place of destination.

Personal.

Among the passengers by the Asia, yesterday, for Liverpool, was MAURICE STRAKOSCH the impressario who goes to Europe for the purpose of engaging a complete operatic corps for the coming campaign.

Obituary.

We regret to have again to chronicle the death of one of those gentlemen of the old school, whose lives have been an example to their fellow-men and a credit to our City. Mr. DAVID HENRIQUES died yesterday at his residence in St. Mark's-place after an illness of some weeks, and at the age of 76 years. Mr. HENRIQUES was born in the city of Kingston, in the island of Jamaica, in the year 1783—where he lived until the year 1823—when, having amassed a competence, and, foreseeing the unhappy social changes which British legislation would effect in that colony, he came to New-York, intending to make this City his permanent home. Some few years after he had settled here, he was induced to enter the firm of the JESUPS, then doing a very large Banking and Stock business in Wall-street. After remaining in that house but a brief space, he withdrew his capital and retired some years before the concern failed. Since that period he has lived in retirement from active life, devoting himself to his family, to whom, as to all who knew him, he was a bright example of rectitude, kindness, charity, sincerity, and unbounded hospitality.

The funeral will take place on Friday morning, from the house in St. Mark's-place, in which the family have resided for the past twenty-eight years.

Amusements.

It would certainly astonish, and it might possibly disgust, some romantic parties who are passing these warm evenings in wandering about the beach at Long Branch, frightening the shell fish at Cape May with love songs, or watching the colored harbor-lights of Newport,—in blissful forgetfulness of the horrid, smoky, hot City,—to learn that people can be found to fill a theatre here in New-York during the present heated term. A stern devotion to truth, however, compels us to astonish and perhaps to disgust those romantic parties. Niblo's Theatre was crowded last evening. The flaneurs who cannot leave town, and whose wonted custom in the afternoon it is to roam up and down Broadway seeking what might "turn up," and finding that Mr. BURTON was to play Mr. Micawber, went straightway to see him in that character. The rural purchaser of City drygoods or hardware was there also, in order that he might report to his rustic friends that he had seen BURTON; and, finally, the citizen who had nothing to do and did not care to stay at home to do it, went thither also, and the result of these little combinations was that Mr. BURTON played William Micawber to a very large audience on one of the warmest nights of the season.

The Comedy or Drama of "David Copperfield," as everybody knows who has read the novel and seen the play, is a striking example of the audacity rather than the fidelity of the playwright. The ubiquity of the characters, so far as the trifling distance of a couple of hundred miles between London and Yarmouth and Yarmouth and Canterbury is considered, is a feature more rebellious to "the unities" than is frequently ventured upon; and the situations are strangely "dragged" together—nevertheless, the play is an effective one, and if it is not quite so intelligible to those who have not read the novel as to those who have, it is sufficiently clear for the purpose of exhibiting the extraordinary characters of Mr. Micawber and Uriah Heep.

The scenery at Niblo's is not perhaps as well managed now as it would be in the Winter. The Waterloo Bridge, for example, over which Martha attempts to throw herself, is described as in the midst of an Alpine country and on the edge of a small lake, which makes rather a circumscribed sort of Thames. At one period of the representation, too, a junction was effected between two "wings," describing very different localities, which elicited a little ill-natured expression of disapprobation from the audience. A similar occurrence at an inferior Theatre once drew from a Cockney visitor the indignant remonstrance: "We don't look for no good grammar here, but you might shut your scenes to"—a rebuke which was dignified and respectable in comparison with the sibillant reproof administered last evening for an offence which, in such weather, might reasonably be considered pardonable.

Mr. BURTON played Micawber in his usual inimitable style, and was loudly applauded throughout the performance. His make up was admirable, except in regard to his "head piece;" which was extraordinary. It may perhaps be well, sometimes, in comedy, to carry things to extremes, but one extremity need not be carried to the other, and at least a foot added to the head. Mr. BURTON should put on another kind of wig when he next appears as Micawber. Mrs. EDDY made an excellent mother of the twins. Mr. EDDY played Pegotty with much feeling, and was the most effective representative of the part we have yet seen. Mr. LESSON played Ham most admirably, and indeed, if one were disposed to say an ungracious thing, or to allude to a gentleman's previous performances this season, we might ask why Mr. LESSON ever plays anything else. David Copperfield, a thankless and an uninteresting part, at best, as the playwright has made it, was rendered even more uninteresting than was necessary by the gentleman who did it, or did for it. The rôle of Emily was said or sung by a young lady who was very pretty, but who spoilt the little that was set down for her—and, indeed, in the scene between Copperfield, Ham and Emily, Mr. LESSON was the only part of the dramatic sandwich worth listening to. Miss Dartle found a most able representative in Mme. PONISI, notwithstanding that in her last scene she slightly over-Dartled it. The lady who undertook the part of the proud Mrs. Steerforth dressed it like a landlady at en bon, and acted it in the same spirit. Mrs. HUGHES did Betsey Trotwood as Mrs. HUGHES does everything else, which is as much praise as we know how to bestow, and Mr. DAVENPORT made an excellent Steerforth. Miss MARY DEVLIN performed Martha better than we remember to have ever seen it done, and Mr. DAWSON covered himself with glory in the part of Uriah Heep.

Mr. BURTON is announced to appear at Niblo's Theatre every night this week.

At Wallack's Theatre the new burlesque of "Lalla Rookh" finds abundant favor with the public and will be continued indefinitely.

Musical.

There was a much larger attendance at Jones' Wood yesterday than on the two previous days. The grounds were particularly well filled in the evening, and the performances were eminently successful.

Mr. STRAKOSCH left yesterday in the Asia, to make arrangements in Europe for the Operatic campaign in the Winter. The stockholders of the Academy of Music have we understand, contributed an assessment to the extent of $20,000, which sum Mr. S. takes with him in a letter of credit from one of the leading Banking-houses of this City, and which will enable him to secure talent, as the play-bills say, "regardless of expense." It is rumored that Messrs. STRAKOSCH and ULLMAN are operating in concert, and are determined to make the New York Opera season of 1859-60 the most brilliant on record.

ASTORIA CLUB VS. INDEPENDENT.

The return game between the above clubs was played yesterday afternoon upon the grounds of the Independent, Eighty-second-street and Second-avenue. A few weeks since these Clubs played their first match at Astoria, L. I., in the presence of a large number of the residents, which resulted in favor of the Astoria Club. The latter Club also won the game yesterday. The following is the score:

ST. GEORGE'S CLUB VS. BROOKLYN.

The first match this season between the first elevens of these clubs was commenced yesterday at Hoboken. The toss was won by the Brooklyn Club, who gave the first innings to their opponents. The St. George's sent in WALLER and SHARP. WALLER made three runs, and was then caught by MARSH. BURNETT followed, making but one run. HARRY WRIGHT had made three, when one of MARSH'S fine balls took his wickets. The bowling and fielding of each club was good—the batting only fair. The contest will be finished to-day.

Distribution of the Public Lands.

LETTER FROM SENATOR WADE.

The Land Reform Executive Committee, JOHN COMMERFORD, President, met at their rooms in Broadway, on Tuesday evening last. The following letter from B. T. WADE, United States Senator, of Ohio, was read:

JEFFERSON, Monday, July 11, 1859.

Benj. Price, Secretary of National Land Reform Association:

SIR: I have just received your circular, and also a memorial to Congress, in relation to the freedom of our Public Lands. It gives me great pleasure to witness the determined and energetic course your Society are pursuing upon this subject, as it will also, to give your memorial the widest circulation, for of all the important subjects that are pending before Congress, or that can come before that body, none is more important than the distribution of our Public Lands, for in my judgment, upon that may in future depend the character of the Republic itself.

Land, in limited quantities to the actual settlers, and down with all monopolies of the Public Land, should be the watchword of all who have the welfare of the people at heart, and are truly the friends of a simple Republican Government. I thank God, through my whole term in Congress, I have never voted for any of these railroad grants, except that great national project of a railroad to the Pacific.

It seems almost unnecessary to circulate a petition in this State upon the subject proposed, as our people are more nearly unanimous upon this subject than any other. In the largest Convention ever held in this State by the Republicans, it was made a fundamental principle on the platform by a unanimous vote, and woe to the representative in Congress of any party, who shall fail to stand by the principle.

The only serious opposition with which it will be met, will be from the Southern, or Slaveholding States.

It was from that quarter it received a fatal blow in the last Congress, being killed in the Senate by the casting vote of Vice-President BRECKINRIDGE, yet, I have every reason to believe, that had it escaped this ordeal and passed Congress, it would have met

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

DEPARTURE OF JUSTICE WELSH FOR EUROPE.—Among the passengers by the Asia, which left this port yesterday for Liverpool, was Justice JAMES H. WELSH, who seeks renovation of impaired health in a few months absence from the cares of office. A gratifying testimony to his merits and the affection with which he is regarded by his fellow citizens was afforded on the occasion. Previous to the sailing of the steamer, some five hundred gentlemen, of all shades of politics, assembled at Patten's Hotel, where, amidst a profusion of good things that cheer the body, toasts and speeches, having the health, prosperity, and safe return of the Justice in view, were delivered by Messrs. JAMES KELLY, JOHN H. WHITE Justice SHERMAN BROWNELL, GEORGE WILKES, Dr. QUACKENBOS, and others. Robertson's Band was engaged, and preceded this large assemblage of Mr. WELSH's friends in their procession from the Hotel to the steamer James A. Stevens, lying at the foot of Murray-street, by which they were conveyed to the Asia, at her dock at Jersey City, where the Justice was escorted on board, and introduced, in a neat speech by Justice BROWNELL, to Capt. LOTT, the commanding officer of the steamer. Amid the firing of cannon and the cheers of hundreds, the James A. Stevens then proceeded down the Bay, but was soon overtaken and passed by the Asia. However, when about eight miles beyond Sandy Hook, by dexterous management on the part of her captain and pilot, the little steamboat "headed off" the Cunarcer, and got fairly alongside of her, maintaining that position for ten or twelve minutes, which interval was wholly devoted to such cheers as only warmhearted friends can give to a man worthy of their friendship. Handkerchiefs waved; cannon boomed; the band played. Then the Asia shot into the swell of the Atlantic, and the Stevens returned to the City. On reaching Quarantine, a collation was prepared for those on board by Mr. T. C. BURNS, of "Nautilus Hotel," which was, it is needless to say, taken in such good part, that very little was left of it, when the summons to reëmbark was given. Subsequently, on landing in the City, another collation was prepared, through the good offices of Dr. P. C. VAN WYCK, at Patten's Hotel, which also was not coolly disposed of.

SUICIDE OF A YOUNG WOMAN.—Mrs. MARY DOBBS, formerly residing with her husband at No. 273½ Chrystie-street, died on Wednesday, at the New-York Hospital, from the effects of a quantity of oil of vitriol which she took on the 11th inst., for the purpose of self-destruction. Infidelity to her husband, and remorse of conscience, are stated to have induced the act of suicide. Two years ago she abandoned him for another, with whom she lived for a few weeks and then returned to her husband, who forgave and received her. A year afterwards she again eloped with another man, with whom she lived for several months, and then was abandoned. She again returned to her husband, who again forgave and received her, and they lived together until about a month ago, when she, for the third time, eloped, but had been absent but two weeks when she returned. This time she failed to procure a reconciliation with her injured husband, who refused to have anything further to do with her. She finally, as above stated, procured poison and thus ended her earthly career. An inquest was held upon her body, and a verdict of "Suicide" rendered.

THE SUICIDE IN TWENTY-FOURTH-STREET.—Capt. S. CARPENTER, of the Sixteenth Precinct, has asked for an investigation of his conduct in connection with the suicide of Mrs. INNESS, and it is understood that an examination will be commenced to day. The Captain claims that there is no rule or law making it the Police Inspector's duty to report a case of suicide, which fell entirely within the province of the Coroner; and there is no evidence showing that Mrs. INNESS came to her death by homicide. The Captain asserts positively that there was an inquest held, in which Doctor AKIN was a member of the Coroner's jury; that he himself had sought to conceal nothing, and only intimated that matters should be kept quiet, because it was requested by Mrs. WHITEMORE. He persists in asserting the respectability of that lady, and declares that he can prove by Mr. BOLLES, a painter residing in this City, that the deceased was his niece, and had been married to Mr. INNESS eight years.

KILLED BY A FALL.—Coroner O'KEEFE held an inquest, on Wednesday, at the New-York Hospital, upon the body of an unknown laborer, about 30 years of age, who died from the effects of a fall into the area of No. 85 Warren-street, received on Monday last. The jury rendered a verdict of "Accidental death," and the body was removed to Bellevue Hospital for identification. Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest the same day at No. 67 Chrystie-street, upon the body of HERMANN DORNBACH, a Prussian youth, 17 years of age, who, while amusing himself with some pigeons upon the roof of his father's house, on Monday, made a misstep and fell to the pavement, a distance of 45 feet, and was so severely injured that death ensued on Wednesday morning. The jury rendered a verdict of "Accidental death."

THE OFFAL AND PIGGERY NUISANCES.—Mr. DOWNING, the Superintendent of Sanitary Inspection, continued yesterday the work which he commenced the day before of notifying the proprietors of the offal-boiling establishments and piggeries up-town that unless their several nuisances are abated within three days, forcible measures will be taken to do away with them. Many of these persons upon whom notices have been served have become frightened, and have removed. Some of the others threaten violent resistance. The City Inspector will make his descent upon them probably next Monday. He will take about fifteen wardens, picked men, with him, and policemen will be detailed to go to his assistance, if he meets with any serious opposition. He, however, does not apprehend that there will be any.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS FOR THE PEOPLE.—The Croton Board yesterday received in due official form the resolution passed by the Common Council on the 7th ult., directing the Commissioners of the Croton Aqueduct to erect in the most frequented public streets and places in the City fifty Croton water hydrants with cups attached, to be under the supervision of those officers. The Board will have the work done immediately, provided they can arrange for its completion at the stipulated price. Twenty five of the hydrants are to be of the style of the hydrant in Union-square, and the rest are to be of such patterns and forms as the Department may select. The twenty-five from "the Brooklyn Company," similar to the one in Union square, are to cost not more than $10 apiece.

YOUNG MEN'S REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE—POLICE AND POLITICS.—The Young Men's Republican Central Committee held their regular monthly meeting last evening, at No. 518 Broadway, S. B. DUTCHER presiding. JOHN A. COSTA, of the Third Ward, was elected Second Vice-President of the Committee, in place of GEORGE E. SHERWOOD, deceased. Mr. BAILEY, of the Fifteenth Ward, introduced resolutions approving of the recent order of the Police Commissioners prohibiting members of the Department from belonging to political organizations, and Mr. PEPPER, of the Second Ward, offered others, denouncing the order as resaid as "arbitrary, absurd, and inconsistent." A long and animated debate ensued, which was finally ended be referring the subject to a Committee, consisting of Messrs. Woodman, McLord, Pepper, Bailey and Ellery.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—About 9½ P. M., on Tuesday, Officer POWERS, of the First Ward, while on his beat on the Battery, found a man named JOHN GREEFELD suffering from an over dose of laudanum, which he took for the purpose of committing suicide. He was taken to the First Ward Station-house and attended by Dr. ANDREWS, and afterwards removed to the City Hospital and taken in charge by Dr. NOLAN, who pronounced him in a dangerous condition. On his person was found a three-ounce vial of laudanum, labeled No. 124 Cherry-street, of which he had taken about an ounce; also $56 in bills, and a gold watch and chain.

COLLISION IN THE HARBOR.—As the steamboat Wyoming was coming to her dock yesterday afternoon, shortly after 3 o'clock, the Hartford propeller was just leaving, full of freight, bound to the eastward. In consequence of the heavy squall of wind and rain which was prevailing at the time, the Wyoming struck the propeller on her starboard bow, driving her iron-bound guard through the propeller's planks and timbers, making an opening a foot in width and some twenty feet long. The propeller was so much damaged as to oblige her to stop for temporary repairs.

THE PHILADELPHIA FIREMEN.—The reception given to "Perseverance" Hose Company, of Philadelphia, on Tuesday evening, was one of the best displays our firemen have made for a long time. Some twenty Companies turned out to receive them with full ranks and unusual enthusiasm. They are the guests of Howard Engine Company, No. 34, and are well taken care of. Yesterday they visited the Institutions, and to-day, it is understood, they will go on an excursion to High Bridge.

FOR CALIFORNIA.—The United States Mail Steamer Star of the West, Capt. GRAY, left yesterday with the California mails, and about five hundred passengers, among whom was RICHARD H. DANA of Boston. Mr. DANA proposes, after a sojourn in California, to visit the Sandwich Islands and Australia. The Vanderbilt steamer North Star, Capt. JONES, also left for Aspinwall yesterday, having about two hundred passengers for California.

FELL FROM HIS CART AND WAS RUN OVER.—EDWARD SERRINGTON, a colored carman, while driving his cart, loaded with flour, through Washington-street, on Tuesday evening, fell to the pavement, and one wheel of the vehicle passed over his right ankle, crushing it in a frightful manner. He was taken up by the police and conveyed to the New-York Hospital.

FOR EUROPE.—The steamship Asia, Capt. LOTT, left this port yesterday at noon; she carried seventy-eight passengers, and $107 000 in specie. Among the passengers were Justice JAMES H. WELSH, the Rev. JOSEPH HOLDRICK, D.D., the Rev. Dr. LATHROP, of Boston, and MAURICE STRAKOSCH.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Coroner JACKMAN held an inquest on Wednesday, at No. 254 Fulton-street, upon the body of IRA H. RYNO, a native of New-Jersey, 26 years of age, who, while conversing with a friend in the street, suddenly fell dead. The Jury rendered a verdict of "Death from disease of the heart."

BOARD OF EDUCATION—NO QUORUM.—There was not a quorum of the members of the Board of Education present when the hour of meeting arrived yesterday, and the President declared the Board adjourned.

Commissioners of Emigration.

WEEKLY STATEMENT—QUARANTINE MATTERS.

The Commissioners met yesterday afternoon, Mr. VERPLANCK in the Chair.

The weekly statement gives 1,892 as the number of emigrants arrived during the week ending the 20th inst., making a total for the year of 44,678 against 42,868 to the same date in 1858. There are 17 inmates in the Marine Hospital, and 716 in the Ward's Island Institution. The balance of the commutation fund on hand is $20,849 77.

The following letter was received from Dr. JEROME:

QUARANTINE, STATEN ISLAND,
MARINE HOSPITAL, July 20, 1859.

To the Commissioners of Emigration:

GENTLEMEN: On the 25th and 27th June last, as previously reported to you, the Commissioners for Removal of Quarantine Station, did remove from this Hospital all the patients then in course of treatment. The Secretary of the above-named commission stated to me verbally at the time of the removal that he would prepare and send me an account of the disposition made of the sick thus removed. No such account, however, has reached me at this date. I have been furnished with a copy of the resolution, adopted by the Quarantine Commissioners June 22, in which they designate Blackwell's Island as the place to which persons arriving in the port of New-York sick with small pox shall thereafter be sent, and the Floating Hospital as the place to which all other contagious or infectious diseases should thereafter be sent. A similar copy I suppose has been furnished your honorable body. I have also received a letter from the Secretary of the Quarantine Commissioners bearing date June 27, 1859, by which I am required to take notice that all such persons as have hitherto been legally sent to the Marine Hospital at Castleton would thereafter be sent to the above-mentioned places, to wit: Blackwell's Island and Floating Hospital. Since which period no sick persons have been sent to the Marine Hospital at Castleton by either the Health Officer of the Port of New-York or the Board of Health of the City of New-York. On the 16th inst. I addressed a note of inquiry to Dr. A. N. Gunn, Health Officer, asking to what place or places he sent persons arriving in the port of New-York sick with contagious or infectious diseases as a substitute for the Marine Hospital at Castleton. To which inquiry Dr. Gunn stated to me verbally that he intended to be governed by the resolutions of the Quarantine Commissioners above mentioned. I assume, therefore, that not only the Health Officers, but the Board of Health of the City of New-York hereafter intend to send the class heretofore sent to the Marine Hospital at Castleton, to the Floating Hospital and Blackwell's Island. In order to give to such the attention due, I shall require at least one assistant physician to remain permanently at Floating Hospital; for which place I most respectfully nominate Dr. Charles D. Robinson, of Hornellsville, N. Y. Understanding by the terms of your resolution according Blackwell's Island as a place to which small-pox patients may be sent, to be a temporary arrangement, I forbear appointing to that service until further advised.

With sentiments of respect, I have the honor to be your obedient servant. J. H. JEROME,
Physician Marine Hospital.

Commissioner JELLINGHAUS said that he did not know why Dr. Jerome needed an assistant. He should like a position himself where he could walk around and enjoy the fresh air, doing nothing, and drawing pay at the rate of $5,000 per annum.

The communication was referred to the President of the Board, and its counsel, Mr. Devlin.

Mr. KENNEDY sent in a communication, stating that during the Quarantine troubles the Mayor sent to the Dépôt at Castle Garden 44 pistols, 31 rifles, and 5,000 cartridges. Of these, Mr. KENNEDY placed 38 pistols, 28 rifles, and 3,000 cartridges, on board the steamer which conveyed the Police to Quarantine. Capt. WALLING afterwards obtained 1,000 cartridges, leaving at the Garden 3 rifles and 16 pistols in his (Mr. KENNEDY'S) possession. These arms were used by the police force detailed for the protection of the Garden, and there now remain 3 rifles, 9 pistols, and 1 000 cartridges. Seven pistols are missing. When the police force returned from the Quarantine, they did not leave the arms at the Garden, though four rifles, three of which were damaged, were left on the steamboat which brought the police up. The arms which were recently used in defence of the dépôt, Mr. KENNEDY is informed, were part of those originally supplied by the New-Haven Arms Company. The communication was referred to Messrs. HUNT, Mayor TIEMANN, Mr. VERPLANCK, and Mr. KENNEDY. The following resolutions, complimentary to Mr. PILSBURY, were passed, and the Board adjourned:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of Emigration accept with great regret Mr. PILSBURY'S resignation of the office of superintendent of their establishments on Ward's Island, which he has held since Oct 1, 1855, from which date to the present time there has not occurred a single occasion of dissatisfaction or cause of censure from this Board, or any circumstance in any degree impairing their confidence in him or their approbation of his administration.

Resolved, That Mr. PILSBURY having entered upon the office under the Commissioners at a period when various causes had tended to impair the condition of the establishments at Ward's Island, and materially to embarrass their financial condition, it is in a large measure due to his judgment, firmness, untiring zeal and vigilance and enlightened economy that this commission has been rescued from these difficulties, whilst increased comfort and efficiency have been added to these establishments for the relief of alien emigrants. With the full confidence that he will exhibit the same executive ability, with the same judgment and integrity, in the more extensive sphere of duty to which he is now called, the Board render to him their cordial thanks for his past services to the great interests under their charge, and their sincere wishes for his future happiness and continued public usefulness.

Health Commissioners.

Little business of interest was transacted by the Health Commissioners yesterday. Dr. MUNDAY, on behalf of Dr. GUNN, who was absent, recommended that the brig Guneri, from Matanzas, and the Betsey Aimes, from St. Jago de Cuba, be permitted to come up as far as Ellis' Island, and there discharge cargo on lighters. The permission was granted, on motion of Alderman MCSPEDON. It was directed that the Linda Stewart, from St. Jago, the brig James E. Ward, and the schooner Robert Palmer be permitted to discharge cargo above Canal-street, or at the Atlantic Dock, Brooklyn.

Communications were received from JOHN GREEN, offering to remove all dead animals from the streets, for $10,000 per annum, and from THOS. SEWELL, offering to do the same for $25 per day. The whole matter was referred to a Committee, consisting of Messrs. DELAVAN, MCSPEDON and CORNELL, who are to report thereon at the next meeting. The Commissioners adjourned to Friday.

Police Reports.

CHARGE OF FORGERY.—Mr. Edgar C. Hull, President of the American Gas Company, was arrested on Wednesday, on complaint of Lucien Ayer, Secretary of the Company, charged with forgery, in fraudulently entering upon the books of the Company the following, with intent to cheat and defraud said Company:

"At a subsequent meeting of the said Board of Directors of said Company, on the 9th of September, 1857, present all the above named Directors, E. C. Hull was chosen President and Lucien Ayer was chosen Secretary for the ensuing year. The salary of the President was fixed at $2,000 per annum, and that of the Secretary at $1,000 per annum, payable monthly. The Board then adjourned. L. AYER, Secretary."

Justice CONNOLLY will investigate the case shortly.

ARREST FOR PICKING A WOMAN'S POCKET IN A STAGE.—Amelia Vigoreaux, of No. 89 West Twenty Sixth-street, appeared and made complaint against Mary Ann King for picking her pocket of a portemonnaie, containing $45 63, while she was riding in a Broadway and Sixth avenue stage, on the 2d of July. Mrs. Vigoreaux felt her dress pulled down, and at the instant saw Mary Ann King sitting at her right hand, and no one else was near her. She missed her money as soon as she had gone into a store in Twenty first-street and Eighth avenue to make a purchase. Five days afterwards she visited the Detective Headquarters, and says she recognized Mary Ann in that interesting gallery of art. She has not seen her since until Tuesday evening, after her arrest, when she fully recognized her as the person who sat beside her in the stage. Notwithstanding that Dr. Atherly, of No. 521 Grand-street, swore that Mary Ann was sick in a house in Brooklyn on the 2d of July, and that he prescribed for her, and that she was confined several days to the house; and Thomas Richards, of No. 63 Fulton-street, Brooklyn, swore to the same effect. Justice KELLY held Mrs. King in $500 to appear for trial on the first Monday in August. Michael Byrne became her security.

ARREST OF A PICKPOCKET.—Chas. Chesney was brought before Justice KELLY, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, by Officer Alexander Smith, of the Ninth Ward, upon complaint of Leonard Travis, for attempting to pick the pocket of the latter while he, with his family, was viewing the firemen's parade on Tuesday evening. Mr. Travis suspected three men who were near him, and waited until he felt a hand in his pocket, when he seized both hands of the thief and held him until Officer Smith came and arrested him. His comrades escaped. Mr. Travis narrowly escaped the loss of a pocket-book, containing $150. Chesney was held in $500 to answer.

ARREST AND ESCAPE FROM THE FIFTH WARD STATION-HOUSE.—A man giving his name as Thomas Anderson, was arrested by Officer Luther Horton, of the Second District, charged with stealing a silver watch, valued at $50, nine dollars in bills, eight dollars in silver, a gold locket, and other articles valued at $87 55, the property of Mrs. Anne Larkins, of No. 114 Hudson street. The man was identified by Mrs. Larkins, and the property was found in his possession. He was locked up in the Fifth Ward Station, but in the morning, when he was called for with the other prisoners, he was missing, having climbed through the window of the officers' sleeping apartment and escaped.

ROBBERY ON THE FIVE POINTS.—A Mrs. Anna McClusky, residing as a servant in Connecticut, was robbed on Monday night by three persons, Edward Owens, Anna Comers and Mary McLane, whom she was visiting at No. 145 Worth-street, Five Points. She had $100 in money, which she was so indiscreet as to exhibit, and her friends got her to drink, and then robbed her of this and about $40 worth of clothing. They then kept her locked up until Wednesday afternoon, when she got into the street and narrated the circumstances to Officer Golden, of the Sixth Ward, who arrested the three offenders and recovered about $20 worth of the clothing, but the money could not be found. The prisoners were all locked up for trial.

STABBING AFFRAY.—Two men named Abraham Devine and Martin Mehan, got into a fight in Oak-street, last night, when Mehan drew a large knife and stabbed his antagonist in the leg. He was arrested, and the wounded man was cared for.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

ITEMS.—A boy named HUGH MCLAUGHLIN, six years old, was accidentally drowned yesterday in the water at the foot of Kelsey's-alley.... A male child about one month old was abandoned last Tuesday night at the corner of Main and York streets. It was sent to the Almshouse.... The corner stone of the Washington-avenue Baptist Church will be laid this afternoon at 4 o'clock.... JULIA BROWN, three years old, whose parents reside in Johnson, between Duffield and Gold streets, fell into a cistern yesterday and was drowned.... SAMUEL LYONS, who resided at the corner of Douglass and Bond streets, was found dead in bed yesterday morning; cause, apoplexy.... A boy named ROBERT TAYLOR nearly lost his life yesterday by remaining in the water too long.... A druggist's clerk on Flushing-avenue, near Broadway, a few days ago, for sweet oil for a child put up the oil of poppy. The mistake was accidentally discovered by the child's mother as she was about to administer the poison.

A VISIT OF INSPECTION BY THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE.—General Superintendent PILSBURY has arranged to visit the Police Stations of the Western District to-day, and, consequently, considerable preparation has been made by the police. He will find many of the Station Houses but poorly calculated for the objects for which they are used; and he may possibly find that less than 200 men is hardly a sufficient force for so large a City.

BURGLARY.—The house of Mr. SPENCER, on Adams, near Johnson street, was entered by burglars Monday night last, and ransacked from garret to cellar. The family were absent from the city at the time, and how much the thieves carried away is not known, but the silver ware was not touched, as it was in a good safe. An entrance was effected by bursting in the back basement door with an axe.

CITY COURT.—The case of MCCONNELL vs. BACKUS, for assault and battery, which has occupied the attention of the Court since Wednesday last, was given to the jury yesterday afternoon, when they retired, but had not agreed upon a verdict at the rising of the Court. Calendar for this day, No. 22, Caughty vs. Remsen; 28, Miller vs. Denman; 25, Brown vs. Galloway; 26, Myers, Jr. vs. Beard.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—A meeting of this Board was held yesterday evening in the County Jail, Raymond-street. Considerable routine business was transacted, when the Board adjourned to the 21 of August, at 3 o'clock P. M.

NEW-YORKERS' BALL AT NEW-BEDFORD.—The citizens of New-Bedford are to be entertained next Saturday evening, at the Parker House, by a party of New-York gentlemen, now engaged in a pleasure cruise in the Andrew Stewart. Everything appertaining to the entertainment will be sent down from this City, but the invitations, about 300 in number, will not be delivered in New-Bedford until the arrival of the schooner at her moorings. The sailing company comprise many of our most distinguished citizens, and we doubt not that the "feast of reason and flow of soul" will be mutually agreeable to the city visited and the visitors of city.

NATURE IS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN.—This is now admitted by the medical profession as a fundamental principle of healing science. It is wisely provided by the human economy that whenever anything is wrong in the physical system the natural forces of the body are brought to bear to expel the disease. The great aim, therefore, is to strengthen the natural powers. This has been kept in view by the skilful compounders of Dr. J. HOSTETTER'S BITTERS, which operate to give fresh vitality to all the organs of the body. The effects of this medicine upon the stomach, the liver, and the kidneys, are prompt and decisive. The patient who is wise enough to quit drugging and try the Bitters soon feels as if he had taken a new lease of life and as he continues the use of the article, he is overjoyed to find the streams of health coursing through his frame. Let all from whose cheek the bloom has departed give Dr. J. HOSTETTER'S celebrated Bitters a trial.
Sold by Druggists and dealers generally, everywhere.

THE SUMMER SEASON IS UPON US, bringing with it the usual train of enjoyments and calamities. While we are enabled to participate in its many pleasures, we are sadly reminded that the same sun which carries with it such blessing is disastrous to thousands of our race. The tiny children, which are the light of numerous households, suffer untold agonies from the "Summer Complaint," while persons of mature years are afflicted with diseases of the digest

The Philadelphia Sunday Troubles.

DECISION AGAINST THE ARRESTED CAR-DRIVER—HE REFUSES TO GIVE BAIL AND IS COMMITTED TO JAIL.

The Philadelphia papers report the progress of the war against the City Railroad Companies. The car-driver, arrested on Sunday, was committed to prison on Tuesday, 19th, to answer for a breach of the peace, having refused to give bail, under advice of counsel. The Press gives the decision of the committing magistrate, as follows:

"Quite a crowd of people interested in the Sunday car question, assembled at the office of Alder man HUTCHINSON, yesterday morning, to hear his decision in the case of WM. H. JEANDELL, who was arrested on the charge of driving a car on the Green and Coates street line, on Sunday last. The Company was represented by DAVID WEBSTER and LUCAS HIRST, Esqs. The prosecution was not represented.

At 11 o'clock the Alderman gave in his decision as follows:

"The simple question which I am called upon to decide in the present case is, whether there is sufficient evidence to bind the defendant over for a breach of the peace, and in doing this I shall consider it in the same manner as any other case brought before me in committing magistrate, and of course, hearing but one side of the question.

Complaint had been made to the Mayor by certain parties, that the running of the cars of the Green and Coates streets Railway Company, on Sunday, 11th inst., had disturbed their religious exercises. In consequence of which, the Mayor had requested the Company not to run their cars on Sunday, as he considered it, under the circumstances, a breach of the peace. The Mayor accordingly gave orders to the police to stop any cars from running on this road on Sunday last. How far the Mayor was right or wrong in this matter it is not my business to inquire. The cars started on Sunday at about 1 o'clock P. M., and when at Twenty-second and Coates streets were stopped by the police, and a driver was arrested, and I was sent for to take bail, which was entered by Mr. PASSMORE, for a hearing on Monday morning at 11 o'clock. No hearing was had or asked for on Sunday. Monday, July 18, 11 A. M., parties having appeared, and the witnesses being examined who made the arrest, upon their evidence, I consider it my duty to hold the defendant (the driver) in the sum of $300, to answer the charge of a breach of the peace. With the abstract question I have nothing to do. My course on the question is induced by a desire that the matter may be speedily brought before a higher tribunal, and the whole matter adjusted in such a manner as may be consistent with the rights of all parties and according to the law of the land, as expounded by our superior courts."

The conductor was not arrested on Sunday, although some of the witnesses examined on Monday, were under the impression that such was the case.

By the advice of counsel, the defendant declined entering bail, and he was accordingly committed to the charge of the officers, who conveyed him to jail. This much talked-of question will probably be decided in a short time, as it will be carried to the Supreme Court, a petition having been filed to that effect yesterday."

The churches are uniting in opposition to Sunday travel. On Monday evening, in pursuance of a notice publicly given from the pulpits on Sunday, a large number of the ministers, elders, and members of the eight United Presbyterian churches of the city assembled in the Rev. Dr. DALE's church, Race-street, for the purpose of taking action. A committee, appointed for the purpose, reported a series of strong resolutions, prefaced by the following preamble:

"Your Committee view with great alarm the recent outrage upon the sanctity of God's holy day, by the running of passenger cars through the streets of our city, thereby publicly setting at defiance the laws of God and the Commonwealth. Your Committee cannot but regard the present aspect of the times as calling upon all God's people for deep humiliation and more earnest fervent prayer, that the evils which threaten our city may be averted, and that we may yet be permitted to enjoy that great bulwark of our civil and religious liberty, the quiet sanctity of the Christian Sabbath."

The two concluding resolutions adopted by this meeting read as follows:

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves, on our own part, and will use our influence accordingly in our respective spheres not to patronize on week days such cars as are employed in the desecration of the Sabbath, where other modes of public conveyance can be obtained.

Resolved That we regard the traveling in such cars on the Lord's day as a violation of the law of God, and that we solemnly warn our people against it.

We find the following paragraphs in the Germantown Telegraph:

"When the two cars of the Green and Coates streets Railway Company, drove out of their depôt at 1 o'clock last Sunday afternoon, filled with quiet, well-dressed citizens, and the first was arrested, for a breach of the peace, by Sergeant OAR, the Chief of Police, Mr. RUGGLES rode up in a carriage, and ordered the arrest of the driver of the second car that was approaching."

"The Rev. JOHN CHAMBERS, of Philadelphia, it is stated, denounced the running of the passenger cars on Sunday, very bitterly, in his sermon on the 10th inst., and when the service was ended he stepped into a handsome carriage in waiting for him at the church door and was driven home."

THE TEXAS INDIANS.—The Belton (Texas) Independent says that forty Rangers, under command of Capt. BROWN, left that place on the 1st inst. for the Reserve. These Rangers go in accordance with the agreement between the State Commissioners and the frontiersmen, to patrol the lines of the Reserve and see that no Indians leave it until their final removal. The Independent adds: "Major VAN DORN has not been at the Reserve, but sent two companies of infantry down to assist in its defence. Those have gone back, and Capt. PLUMMER, with one company, only remains."

THE GUANO ISLANDS IN THE PACIFIC.—In an opinion of the Attorney-General on the case of Johnson's Islands, in the Pacific, claimed by the Pacific Guano Company, he affirms:

1 That the case presented is one that admits the exercise of the discretionary power of the President conferred by the act of Congress of Aug. 18, 1856; and,

2. That the Pacific Guano Company is the proper party to give the bond required by that act.

THE POLAR REFRIGERATOR,
WITH FILTER AND WATER-COOLER COMBINED.

The ice box is made in a wedge form, of corrugated zinc, and it completely divides and forms two separate provision chambers. The ice is placed in the upper portion of this box upon a strong rack; immediately beneath the rack is a filter, through which the ice water strains as it melts, falling into the lower angle, where it is retained for its frigorific properties, or to have more water added and drawn off by a faucet, for drinking or culinary purposes; an overflow pipe is arranged so that the water cannot reach the ice.

It is self-ventilating—the air being taken first through the ice, and no one article of food can impart its flavor to another.

But its greatest feature is the manner and certainty by which the moisture is taken from it and around the provisions. This is done by leaving exposed to the provision chambers the cold corrugated sides of the ice and ice-water receptacle, whereon all moisture is condensed and quickly carried off by the waste-pipe.

PRICES—No. 1, $16; No. 2, $20; No. 3, $25; No. 4, $30; No. 5, $35; No. 6, $40.

MUSICAL.

THE DRIGGS PATENT PIANO-FORTE,
OR THE VIOLIN PIANO,

It is built upon an iron frame, or bed plate, entirely separate from the case, thus relieving the sound-board and every other part of the instrument from the strain. It will remain in tune for many months, and when the strings are settled even for years.

It has cover sounding-boards above and below, like the violin, which are connected together in the same manner, thus making the entire instrument a vibratory shell.

It has greater depth and fullness of tone, and its sostenuto, or power of sustaining the tone, has never been equaled, except by instruments of the violin class.

It improves with age and use, becoming more vibratory, and the tone purer and more sonorous.

It is the best piano-forte existing, and is recommended by Gottschalk, Thalberg, and many other celebrated artists and professors. Sole Agents.

DR. JEFFRIES' ANTIDOTE.
It makes a speedy cure without the least restriction of diet, drink, exposure or change in application to business. This desirable result is obtained in from two to ten days, and as it neither creates nausea nor offends the palate, and renders unnecessary all deviation in diet, or interruption to usual pursuits, sound sleep, or healthy digestion, the disease is thus removed as speedily as is consistent with the production of a thorough and permanent cure. Price $1 per bottle. C. H. RING, General Agent, No. 178 Broadway, New-York; Redding, Boston; Jenkison, Albany; Callender Philadelphia. Also for sale as above, Ring's celebrated Rosewash, price 25 cents.

HUNDREDS OF THE UNFORTUNATE
Have disappointed of a cure by not calling on DR HUNTER at first, the Hunterian Dispensar, No. 3 Duane-st., New York City, established in 1834, for the Treatment of Human Life. PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—Dr. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated not less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours. It roots out the poison put into the blood is sure to absorb unless this remedy is used. It is $1 a vial and cannot be obtained genuine except here but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Advice for nothing, that treats of the evil effects of early abuse and indulgence, is embellished with elaborate colored engravings, portraying every feature and phase of disease, exposes the failure of the ordinary modes adopted for the cure of locals as well as hereditary maladies, and gives the only safe and infallible remedy for expunging every taint of the virus from the system. DR is deplorable to witness some of the cases that are presented to Dr. H., where the disease has been driven into the system by quacks to break out again in the form of spots and ulcers on the body, pains in the joints and throat, night sweats and emaciation.

DR. WATSON HAS, FOR A LONG SERIES
of years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated a large number of cases with a success which has won for him the confidence of the public. The results of his remedies are such that there is no interruption to business. Dr. WATSON receives patients in separate consulting rooms, from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M., at No. 459 Broome st., second block west of Broadway.
Dr. WATSON'S Work, THE CAUSE AND CURE, issued simultaneously in London and New-York is the only one which clearly explains the nature and mode of treatment of PRIVATE DISEASES in all their different forms; and treats also in full of SPERMATORRHŒA, the result of early indiscretion, excess or other causes. Anatomical plates of a superior kind, and drawings of every form of disease. Price $1, post paid. "Dr. WATSON'S Work has been written by a person of great practical knowledge, and we cordially recommend it."—Medical Journal. Sold by the author, as above; also, by
CHAS MILLER, No 436 Broadway, New-York.

The GREAT BRITA

Our Indian Policy.

I send you for publication a letter from ANSON DART, Esq., late Superintendent of Indian Affairs in Oregon, which shows very conclusively the superiority of the peace policy over the war policy, in our management of the Indian tribes.

Mr. DART was appointed to this important superintendency by President TAYLOR, and made it a condition of his acceptance that all troops be withdrawn from the Territory. This was complied with. He then proceeded to effect a settlement of all existing differences between the Indians and whites; and for three years, maintained a state of harmony between them, and at a trifling expense to the Government, until he was superseded in 1853. Under Mr. DART, the entire expense of that Department was less than $24,000 a year. Since his time it has never been less than $350 000 a year, and has reached $750,000, exclusive of war claims made by the people of Oregon and Washington, amounting to $5,000,000.

In a report made to the House of Representatives by Mr. COLFAX, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, in January last, it is said that "during the whole of his (Mr. DART'S) superintendency, peace and quiet were maintained among all the Indian tribes under his care, and also between them and their white neighbors;" that he "negotiated no less than thirteen Indian treaties, saving to the Government the usual expense of commissioners for their negotiation; that he was disbursing officer for six Indian agencies; that during his term not a cent of money was expended to quell Indian difficulties; and that the expenses of the superintendency were not over one-fifth as much as in California at the same time, with about the same number of Indians." Very truly, &c.,

J. R. ORTON,
Secretary of Indian Aid Association.

No. 55 BROADWAY, July 16, 1859.

To the Indian Aid Association:

I am fully persuaded that the effort you are making to change the present mode of treatment, as now practiced by our Government towards the Indians, will meet with success, just in proportion to the amount of truth and correct knowledge that shall reach the people upon this subject.

But while there are so many persons that are directly or indirectly interested in keeping up the present system, which calls for the expenditure of so many millions of dollars annually, you will find it very difficult to get the truths and facts before the people.

The result of my acts, while Superintendent of Indian Affairs, in the country now the State of Oregon and Washington Territory, should have some weight in sustaining the position taken by you and others, that kind treatment to the Indians cost but little, while it is sure to make them peaceable and friendly to the white people.

Before I entered upon the duties of my office, I procured the aid of the then able Delegate, S. R. THURSTON, Esq., to persuade the Secretary of War to remove from Oregon all the United States troops. This request was complied with in a few months after I reached Oregon, in 1850; therefore, during my stay of about three years in that country, it was not armed justice that kept all of the Indian tribes of that extensive country peaceable and friendly to the white people.

The entire cost to the Government for every purpose connected with Indian Affairs, for the three years in question, was about $71,000. This sum included about $28,000 expended for Indian presents, and about $12,000 for the Superintendent and Agency houses, and the entire cost of negotiating thirteen Indian treaties, the salaries of the Superintendent and six agents, interpreters, clerk, provisions for Indians, traveling expenses, &c.

But the cost to the Government for managing these same Indians under the more popular system adopted from 1853 to 1856, under the sound of the drum and fife, has been from $300,000 up to $750,000 per annum. This, you will bear in mind, is over and above the little war debt of some five millions yet unpaid

The statements above you will find corroborated by reference to the files in the Second Auditor's Office at Washington.

I am in possession of many other interesting facts connected with Indian affairs, which, if made public, would, I think, aid you very much in your laudable efforts in behalf of the Aborigines of our country.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
ANSON DART,
Late Superintendent of Indian Affairs in Oregon.

The Police and the Processions.

Permit me to correct some erroneous statements in an article by "Paix," in the Tribune of the 19th inst., headed "A Word of Counsel." "Paix" asserts that a cartman's horse became "frightened and unmanageable" in consequence of the crowd and the music that preceded the military, and that the summary style of summersaulting the driver was unnecessary and uncalled for. Both the statement and inference are incorrect. The writer stood within five yards and witnessed the whole affair, and is unwilling it should rest in the shadow of so glaring a misrepresentation.

The really "unmanageable" animal was the driver, who was evidently much the greater brute of the two. He had evidently determined to drive through the Company, musicians and all, and evinced an amount of resoluteness that would have better become one of his canine congeners of the species bull-dog.

The Police, after repeated attempts to induce him to take a position in line with other vehicles by the curb-stone, were finally compelled to turn the horse's head round, and though this was repeated, the obstinate driver retaining the reins, each time brought him instantly back, literally "facing the music," which by this time had halted to avoid being trampled upon. Thereupon the "Hercules" of an officer did incontinently give the fellow an impressive lesson in "ground and lofty tumbling," that surprised him, at the same moment out of his propriety and his cart, though he still clung with desperate pertinacity to the reins. Both animals were promptly led out of the way and the Company resumed their march. These are the simple facts. There was neither undue haste, "insane rage," nor "wanton assault," but a prompt and resolute performance of the duty for which the Stars were detailed. VINDICATOR.

Pic-Nic of the Second United Presbyterian Church Sunday-School.

This School belongs to the Church meeting in the lecture-room of the Brooklyn Institute. On Tuesday, notwithstanding the threatening rain, they went to Clifton Park, Staten Island. Persons may think it strange to go on pleasure errands in stormy weather, but the fact is, such weather has the tendency to drive persons in among themselves; mingling and mixing them up together like common drops of water.

The children were all in glee, as usual, and the parents, teachers and friends were nearly all children. Two hundred were abroad; every one of whom determined to enjoy themselves. And so they did; old and young, like a family who all agree in harmony, bent upon the happiness of each other. There were no heartier laughs there than the children's, or lack, for that matter, of these on any side; mirth, wit, and worth, had divided reign. The diversions of the day passed off most happily.

Dinner hour arrived—it was none of the piece-meal, away-by-yourself affairs; nibbling from a basket. But altogether, in a long room, at a long table, where all could sit down at a hearty, substantial meal, having, according to Scripture, "All things in common."

The Pastor, a much-loved man, closed the day by appropriate remarks, prayer, and singing; sending all home in the right frame of mind.

Long will it be ere those who participated in this festal treat, will forget how much enjoyment—if you have good company—may be had within seven miles from New-York. ONE OF THEM.

A New Candidate for the Mayoralty.

In several of the City papers the question of the Mayoralty has recently been the theme of discussion, and the names of well-known citizens have been mentioned in connection with this important office. If possible a candidate should be selected upon whom men of all parties can cordially unite, without the fear of being ostracised by their party, or of incurring the hot displeasure of its leaders, or executioners.

Allow me, Mr. Editor, to propose as a candidate for Mayor of New-York, Mr. JOHN JACOB ASTOR, Jr. This gentleman has eminent qualifications for the place. He has intelligence, industry, executive ability of a high order, independence, firmness, unyielding integrity, large experience in all financial matters and is thoroughly conversant with all the interests and wants of the City; is largely identified with its prosperity, and would leave no means untried to add to its honor and reputation and credit.

Mr. ASTOR is a gentleman for whom men of all parties could vote, and one in whom the whole people could place the most implicit confidence. Those who know him well, and know his rare business capacity, will hail him as just the man for Chief Magistrate of New-York.

What say you, Mr. Editor, to the vox populi nomination, and to the election of JOHN JACOB ASTOR, Jr. to the office of Mayor? MANHATTAN.

A Misstatement Corrected.

You have recently published a note from one signing himself "A Member of Dr. CHEEVER'S Church," asking that you will "Correct the impression that three members of that church were opposed to excommunicating Mr. HATCH." The first statement you published was right. Three members out of seventeen voted No on the question of excommunication, and their votes stand so recorded on the book. This your correspondent does not deny, but seeks to convey the impression that they were, after all, in favor of excommunication. This impression ought to be corrected, not on Mr. H.'s account so much as for the credit of those who did distinctly express by their speeches, as well as by their votes, their disapprobation of the manner in which the case of Mr. H. has been treated by the church. Dr. BALL, one of those who voted in the negative, said that, though he thought Mr. H. was in great error with regard to the matter of Sabbath observance, and that it was the duty of the Church to take some action by which it might be understood in the community that it had no sympathy with his views on this subject, yet he thought it would be very wrong to treat him—for holding and advocating opinions which had, without doubt, been entertained by many worthy Christian men—as they would treat a member convicted of the grossest immorality—that is, excommunicate him; therefore he should vote No. One of the others who voted No said he should do so because, whatever Mr. H.'s errors of opinion might be, he did not think he had been treated fairly and honorably, in not allowing him the five minutes for which he asked, in which to state his own views and correct misrepresentations of them, which he thought had been made that evening by several members.

By publishing this correction you will serve truth and justice, and oblige

ONE WHO WAS PRESENT AND KNOWS.

The Pass of the Stelvio.

From Galignani's Messenger.

As a telegraphic dispatch announces that the Austrians have occupied in force the Stelvio Pass, the following details concerning it may prove interesting:

"The Stelvio Pass is in the mountains which join the Rhetian Alps to the mass of the Ortler, and confine the upper part of the Valtelina. It is the highest point in Europe over which man has carried a road; but, notwithstanding that particularity, it is but little known, being out of the line ordinarily taken by tourists. It is 8 850 feet high, that is, 1,183 feet higher than the Mount St. Bernard, over which no vehicle can pass, and nearly 1,000 feet above the region of perpetual snow. When the Treaties of Vienna placed Lombardy and Venitia under the domination of Austria, that power became desirous to open direct communication between Vienna and Milan; and as the road by Istria and Carinthia, in the south, and that by Salzburg, Innspruck, and the Brenner, to the north, were very long and difficult, whilst the road by the Valley of the Inn, the Col of La Maloia, and the Lake of Como, passed partly over Swiss territory, the Austrian Government resolved to construct a road over the Col of Stelvio. The road begins to ascend near the little town of Glurns. It then enters a narrow valley which is traversed by the torrent of the glaciers of the Ortler, and ascends slightly for about two leagues. Then the zigzags commence, and they lead to a spot from which are seen the glaciers of the Cristallo in front, and to the left the Ortler Spitz, a cone covered with frozen snow, 12 058 feet high, and the culminating point of all the Tyrol. To the right is the Col of Stelvio, with the interminable zigzags which lead to its summit. In these zigzags are seven long galleries or tunnels, solidly built, the object of which is to protect the most exposed parts of the road against avalanches and falls of stones. These galleries have saved the lives of many travelers. At the spot where they begin all vegetation has ceased; these is nothing but rock and snow; even the roaring of torrents is not heard; and the deathlike silence which prevails is only occasionally interrupted by the cry of the eagle, the fall of avalanches, or the raging of storms. At the top of the Col there is no hospital, as at St. Bernard, no shelter of any kind, nothing but a stone bearing an inscription that the Col is the boundary of three different countries, the Tyrol, Italy, and Switzerland, and that it is 2,550 fr. higher than the Cols of the Simplon, St. Gothard, Mount Cenis, etc. In descending on the side of the Valteline, after a while some large buildings are found, which serve as hotels, police offices, and barracks for soldiers. They are situated in the upper part of the valley of Beaullo, in which the various torrents unite to form the Adda. From the Col to this station the road descends in zig-zags between high banks of stone. Further on it enters a frightful defile called the 'Horrors of Bormio,' being an immense rent in the mountain, full of precipices, and at the Adda roaring along. In this defile the road is carried over precipices by means of bridges, through masses of rocks by means of tunnels, and in some cases it passes beneath cascades. At last it reaches Bormio, and there the passage of the Col ends. The contrast between the beauty of the country beyond Bormio and the horrible defile is most striking. On the map Glurns and Bormio seem near together; but the winding road which unites them is fifteen leagues long, and is every where so steep that only pedestrians, horses or light mail carts can pass over it. The expense of making the road must have been enormous, and the engineering difficulties immense."

Suicide of a Murderer—A Curious History.

From the Newark Mercury, 20th.

It will be remembered by our readers that on the 13th of June last, a German named PETER MILLER, residing in Walnut-street, in this city, was stabbed at a pic-nic in Roseville, by some person to him unknown, and that four days afterward he died from the effects of his wounds. The case was for some days enveloped in mystery, no one having any definite knowledge of the circumstances of the affray; but a searching investigation by Coroner CRAVEN revealed certain facts which seemed to indicate that the stabs had been inflicted by one HENRY KAUFMAN, and the jury accordingly rendered a verdict that "the deceased came to his death from a stab in the abdomen, by a knife or other instrument in the hands of one HENRY KAUFMAN; and that the said HENRY KAUFMAN did, willfully and maliciously, inflict such wound with intent to injure the deceased." The evidence upon which this verdict was based, though not positive in its nature, was sufficiently emphatic to justify such a rendering; and it being accepted as a fact that KAUFMAN was really the guilty party, every effort was made by the police to ascertain his whereabouts, and bring him to justice. These efforts, however, were not rewarded with success, nothing whatever being ascertained beyond a slight intimation that the accused had fled to Montreal, where it was believed he had a brother. Our detectives, even upon this slight clue, were disposed to prosecute their search, but no reward being offered, and no provision being made for the payment of the expenses which would necessarily be incurred in proceeding to Canada, the matter was finally dropped, and in a great measure passed from the public mind.

Yesterday information was received by Coroner CRAVEN, which confirms the supposition previously entertained, that KAUFMAN, upon escaping from this city, hurried to Montreal. The communication received by the Coroner states that a young man (a German) answering KAUFMAN'S description committed suicide at the St. Nicholas Hotel, Montreal, on the 14th inst., and that the authorities were strongly suspected the deceased to be the murderer of MILLER. From the facts developed at the Coroner's investigation it would seem that the young man reached Montreal on or about the 7th inst. On Friday, the 7th, he called at a boarding-house, where he gave his name as CHRISTIAN LANCK, and stated that he had just arrived from New-York, and desired board. He was accommodated, and continued to reside there up to the evening of the 13th. To his fellow-boarders it was evident there was something preying on his mind, for he was constantly nervous and agitated, while at the same time he was dejected, often exclaiming "that if he told them what was the matter with him they would not believe him." On the evening of the 13th he took tea at his boarding-house, and having dressed himself, went out and did not return. About 11 o'clock that night he entered the St. Nicholas Hotel, and inquired if he could be accommodated with a bed. Having been answered in the affirmative, and requested to enter his name on the register, he stepped up, and with a trembling hand, wrote "HAUFFman, Montreal." The bookkeeper, noticing that his place of residence was Montreal, asked him how it was that he came there?—why not go home?—to which he made reply that he had lost his key, and could not get in. He seemed at that time very nervous. Having paid 25 cents for his bed he was shown to his room. About 5½ o'clock the next morning the inmates heard the report of a pistol, and on the proprietor and the porter attempting to open the door of the room occupied by HAUFFMAN, they found it locked, and on failing to gain admission, forced it open, when he was found lying on his back, with his head toward the door, and a pistol lying at his side. He was quite dead.

Upon examining the clothes of the deceased, some $60 was found, principally in $2 50 gold pieces, and bills of the New-York Bank, of the denomination of $2; also, a silver watch, a few powders, around which was wrapped a paper having on it the name of Dr. HINGSTON. The Doctor, being a resident of Montreal, was summoned, and certified the body as that of a young man who had called upon him a few mornings previous complaining of an eruption that was out on his body, which the Doctor assured him was of no consequence. He apparently left satisfied, but in the evening returned in a state of excitement, stating that there was a universal conspiracy to poison him, and that the eruption then on his body was caused by some poison that had been given him. The Doctor, believing he was insane on that point, said he could give him an antidote, whereupon he appeared greatly rejoiced. He left, taking with him some powders. On his person was also found a letter, in which he stated that ever since 1851 there had been a conspiracy to poison him, and that poison had been administered to him since his arrival in Montreal. Also, that he did not take the powders given him by Dr. HINGSTON, because he believed they were poisonous.

The verdict rendered by the Jury was: "Suicide while laboring under temporary insanity." We presume there can be little doubt that the murderer of MILLER is one and the same person with the Montreal suicide.

INVALID PENSIONERS' EXAMINATION.—Under an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1859, the affidavit of two surgeons or physicians is required biennially in cases of application for the payment of pensions to invalids. The Commissioner of Pensions has issued a circular upon the subject to Pension Agents, in which he directs "invalid pensioners of the army and navy who are subjected to biennial examinations, to present, with their usual vouchers, on the 4th day of September and 1st day of January next, respectively, the certificate as to the state of their disability. The operation of this act of Congress virtually suspends the semi-annual payments of invalid pensions at the commencement of each biennial period, until the certificate of two physicians or surgeons has been presented. Pension agents will pay each pensioner according to the ratio of disability certified to, but in no case for a greater sum per month than the rate expressed in the pension certificate.—Constitution.

WHEAT PANIC.—There was a great wheat panic at Davenport, Iowa, early last week, occasioned by a report that a blight similar to that which killed the wheat crop of Iowa last year was spreading among the wheat in the neighborhood of Davenport. The alarm which prevailed in business circles at this announcement was so great that probably not a hundred dollars could have been borrowed that day in Davenport. The report sent the officers of the law out in the country with executions, levying on cattle, wagons, threshing machines, &c. The whole affair originated in the idle story of a farmer, who should have been in better business. The cause of the fright was entirely unfounded.

Richard Slanson, of Piqua, Ohio, has commenced a suit against the New-York Central Railroad Company for injuries that his wife received at the accident, near Jordan, on the 10th of May last. He lays his damages at $10,000.

The Naturalization Laws and Property in Kentucky.

At the present term of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, a case from Campbell county, involving an important construction of the naturalization laws, was decided. The facts, as reported by the Kentucky papers, are as follows:

"ROGER C. WHITE, a native of Ireland, but a citizen of the United States, died in Cincinnati, where he resided in May, 1851, owning real estate in Newport. He died without issue, leaving a widow, ANN WHITE, two brothers, his mother and sister, all natives of Ireland, but residents of Ohio. One of the brothers, WM. WHITE, having, before his brother's death, taken the preparatory oath to become a citizen, took possession of the land, claiming by descent from him, and also under a deed from the mother, his other brother and sister.

The widow procured an act of the Legislature of Kentucky, authorizing the Auditor to convey to her the interest of the Commonwealth acquired by escheat, on the ground that her husband, having died without heirs capable of inheriting, the title had vested in the Commonwealth. She brought suit for the land and recovered, but before suit was brought, WILLIAM WHITE had become fully naturalized. WHITE appealed, and the case was argued in January last. The Court held it under advisement until within a few days past, and then decided that, by the law of Kentucky, aliens cannot take lands by descent, unless they have resided two years in the State next before the descent cast.

Persons of foreign birth are prima facie aliens, and a person of foreign birth who has taken the preparatory oath, only remains under the disability of alienage as to many civil rights, among them that of inheriting lands, until naturalized. He does not acquire the character of a denizen. There is no act of Congress by which an alien may become a denizen. The title of an alien by descent is not good by relation, he afterwards becoming a citizen; the title would otherwise be in abeyance, which the law does not permit. The wife of a naturalized citizen, she being of foreign birth, is not ipso facto a citizen. She must take the oath of allegiance herself. Naturalization is a personal privilege.

Lands of a person dying intestate, without other than alien heirs, vest in the Commonwealth "without office found," and the champerty laws, which forold the conveyance of lands in adverse possession, are pro tanto repealed by the private act for the benefit of Mrs. White. The question is not decided as to whether the champerty laws apply to grants from the State. Judgment affirmed.

Extraordinary Exhibition—A Man of Leather.

From the Lexington, Ky., Observer.

An exhibition of a very remarkable and unnatural character attracted a small but highly respectable audience at the Melodeon on Thursday evening last. A young man by the name of JAMES STEAVENS, had advertised that he would do many wonderful things in the way of cutting himself up with knives, nailing his feet, arms and legs to chairs, to the wall, &c., which astounding exploits he proceeded to exhibit at the appointed hour, in the presence of a number of physicians of celebrity, including members of the Medical Faculty of Transylvania University, and other learned Professors, who were invited to the stand, that they might detect any fraud or deception, if practiced. He began by sticking a bar'd'ul of pins, up to the head, in his legs, then drove an awl through the middle of his wrist into a chair; drove a knife through the muscle of his leg; nailed his foot to a wooden shoe, the nail or awl passing through the middle of the foot, and so walked about the stage; cut his dexter finger through the fleshy part, exhibiting the naked bone, and concluded by passing a knife through his cheek, the blade protruding from his mouth. In all this but little blood was drawn.

He also offered to drive a knife through each leg, and hang himself from the wall, which the audience mercifully excused him from doing, feeling satisfied that he could accomplish whatever he proposed. About the whole procedure there was no sort of humbug, as the eyes of divers gentlemen, who were upon the stand, were steadily fixed upon him, and any "unbelieving Thomas" had an opportunity to touch the knife-blade on the opposite side to that into which it had been thrust, of his leg, wrist or hand. He used a few galvanic rings about his person, which was probably more for show than anything else, as they could affect nothing. Mr. STEAVENS looks to be not more than twenty or twenty-five years of age. Before closing, he proposed to operate in a similar manner upon any one of the audience, agreeing to forfeit $1,000 if he inflicted pain. This, however, was prudently declined. We saw this man of leather early yesterday morning, looking as fresh and whole, as though knife or nail had never penetrated his elastic body.

The lustre of the diamond is not to be compared to the productions that emanate from a gifted and well balanced mind. Alas! how deplorable is it when such endowments become vitiated by malpractices and the utter prostration of the physical powers. Constitutions thus impared come within the scope of Dr. H. A. BARROW'S experience. He may be consulted as usual at his residence No. 194 Bleeckerstreet, four doors below McDougal-street, New-York, from 11 to 2 and from 4 to 8 daily, Sundays excepted, unless by special appointment.

WEDNESDAY, July 20—P. M.

The Stock Exchange opened, this forenoon, under the effect of the reaction at yesterday's Second Board, and prices were again generally lower, through the early dealings, and also on the Street, between the sessions of the Brokers. But at the afternoon Board there was a partial turn the other way, and prices at the close were, with some few exceptions, steadier, and the general market firm. The most marked decline on the State list, this morning, was in Tennessee Sixes, which dropped to 88 ℔ cent., or about 1 ℔ cent. below the previous sales. This figure was bid at the close. Missouris were also ⅛@⅜ lower, selling and subsequently closing 83¼ ℔ cent. The Western Stocks were again weakened by the depression in Michigan Guaranteed, which sold down to 21½ ℔ cent., but subsequently recovered to 22¼ ℔ cent. The decline of yesterday, in Reading, from 46@46¼ down to 44, induced a pretty free demand at the early Board, at from 44 to 44⅝, and back to 44¼, finally closing 44¼@44½ ℔ cent. The cash sales of New-York Central were generally at 74½ ℔ cent. until near the close, and after the printed list, when 74⅝ ℔ cent. was bid, buyers' option, and 75¾ ℔ cent. cash, and the stock offered at 74⅞, seller 30 days, fully equal to the last quotation of Tuesday. The transfers close on the 31st inst. for the August Dividend, regarding the extent of which the Board of Directors will meet at Albany about the 5th of the month. The shares of the Pacific Mail and of the Panama Company both fell off about 1 ℔ cent. The dealings in Michigan Central at the decline of 1 ℔ cent. were quite free, and there was a demand for Galena and for Rock Island at the concession of ½ ℔ cent, all three closing rather firm. Harlem Preferred and Hudson River participated in the reaction of yesterday to the extent of 1 ℔ cent. on the former and ½ ℔ cent. on the latter, but neither appeared to be offered with much freedom. The closing Share prices compared with Tuesday afternoon are:

	Tues.	Wed.		Tues.	Wed.
Central	74⅞ @ 74⅞		Rock Island	61 @61¼
Hudson	33¼ @ 33½		Galena	64⅛ @64½
Harlem Pref.	36¼ @ 36		Mich. Central	43 @42⅝
Panama	117¾ @116½		M. Guaranteed	23¼ @22⅜
Pacific	70¾ @ 69¾		Reading	44 @44⅜

The steamer Asia, for Liverpool, to-day took $407,010 in specie—the smallest sum for a direct Cunarder for some months past. The other steamers sailing on Saturday are said to offer a more favorable freight to the exporter, by about a sixteenth of one ℔ cent. The regular sales of Exchange to the Import trade do not indicate a large shipment on that day, but as there is an active competition among the Banking and Bullion brokers, with Continental connection, to draw on Paris, an inducement is made to take round sums at rates which certainly leave the smallest fractional profit to the drawer. We learn of sales of sight bills in large parcels at f.5.11⅞ net, and f.5.13⅜ net, at 60 days. Smaller sums are drawn to a point at f.5 11½ net, at short sight, and f.5.12½ at 60 days. Even these terms do not tempt a very free trade business on Paris, most of the demand centering on London at 110½@110⅝ at 60 days, or 110⅝ at sight. The Bankers are selling credits at 110⅜ where first-class Bank bills are not paid in instead.

The Market for Money to-day is very quiet at last quotations. August and September bills, strictly choice names, are done at 6 ℔ cent., and October and November at 7 ℔ cent. Fair signatures rate uniform at Bank at 7 ℔ cent., if within 90 days, and on the Street from 7½ to 9 ℔ cent., 3 to 6 months. The Stock Brokers are not large borrowers to-day, and the rates on demand are steady at 5 ℔ cent., where the Money is voluntarily tendered on first-class collateral, and 5½@6 ℔ cent., when the loan is sought by the borrower. In reference to first-class mercantile paper, outside of Bank, we still remark a moderate offering, and a very commendable caution in new engagements in advance of the actual opening of the Fall trade. Both the Dry-Goods jobbers and wholesale Grocers appear to buy sparingly, and some of the Importers complain of the backwardness of trade, particularly from the South. They are generally busy, however, with their Custom House entries and other preparations for the trade, and as a general remark easy in means, having in May and June anticipated a large share of their engagements abroad. The Customs to-day are $155,000. The disbursements of the Sub-Treasury are $107,000 short of this sum, and the balance this afternoon is raised to $4,806,877.

There is already an improvement in the Anthracite Coal trade which imparts more confidence to the great carriers. The Reading in June made a gain of $23,000 on the traffic of last year, and the business in July is looking better. The net finances of the Company show a profit of $614,810 for the season against $519,348 same time last year. The shipments of coal per Delaware and Hudson Canal for 1859, are:

	Del. & Hud. Lackawanna	Penn. Co. Pittston.
Week ending, July 16	19,917	23 615
Previous shipments	195,776	273 288

The Albany Journal of yesterday notices the death, at the residence of his father, after a brief illness, of Mr. CHARLES L. DEFOREST, Stock Broker of this City, of VANSCHAICK & DEFOREST, Exchange-place. This young gentleman left town on the 1st July in robust health, on a brief visit to his family friends in Albany. He took violent cold on the night boat up the Hudson, which resulted in the fever that caused his death.

A well-advised Railway correspondent writes that he has advices from Logansport to the purport that the Toledo, Logansport and Burlington Railroad Company commenced laying track at the New-Albany and Salem Railroad crossing, on the 16th inst. About 3,000 tons of their iron has already arrived from England, and is being rapidly forwarded westward, and they have bills of lading for the balance contracted for. They contemplate making a connection with the Peoria & Oquawka Road, at the State line, by the 15th of September, and at Logansport with the Toledo & Wabash Road, by the 15th of October. Our correspondent thinks that in view of the large crop of Wheat already secured in Illinois, this line, when open, will probably have a very large freight business to Toledo, as there is a saving by this route of nearly 1,000 miles over shipments made from Illinois by water communication vid Chicago.

Of the Louisville and Nashville Railway, now hastening to completion, the Louisville Courier reports:

"The main road is now being run over by daily trains of cars from Louisville across Green River at Munfordville, a distance of seventy-four miles. At the Nashville end the cars are running over the whole distance of seventy one miles between Bowling Green and Nashville, except nine miles, which are now ready for the iron. There are, therefore, 135 miles of the main road over which the cars are now running, which leave only forty-eight miles yet to be completed. On these forty-eight miles much the greater part of the work is done, and the cars will run over the whole line from Louisville to Nashville before the first day of January next."

The Chicago Tribune gives the following plain statement of the case of the disputed Bonds of Illinois, known as the McAllister & Stebbins' Loan:

"When JOHN D. WHITESIDES, one of the Fund Commissioners of Illinois, was in want of $260,000 with which to discharge accruing obligations of the State, he applied to MCALLISTER & STEBBINS, of New-York, for a loan, offering to pledge $900,000 of bonds as security therefor. The firm accepted his proposition, and getting possession of all or a part of the bonds in advance of the completion of the transaction, hypothecated a few of them, say $120,000, for funds that they lacked in making up the amount. The State failed to pay MCALLISTER & STEBBINS what Mr. WHITESIDES had borrowed, and MCALLISTER & STEBBINS failed to redeem the bonds which they had hypothecated. The holders of these bonds to the amount above stated put them on the market and sold them at public auction to the highest bidder. A part were bought in by the Mechanics' Banking Association, a part by the Bowery Insurance Company, and the remainder—some seven or eight bonds—by other parties, at prices, so they say, ranging from 48 to 76 cents on the dollar. The State repudiated WHITESIDES' action and disowned the bonds which he had pledged, though it had received and spent the money that was obtained for them. For eight years nothing further was done in the premises.

In 1847, a Funding act was passed, from the benefits of which those bonds were expressly excluded. In 1849 another act was passed for the settlement of the whole matter. The law was a tardy acknowledgment of the claim of MCALLISTER and STEBBINS, and was the very least that the State could then have done. It permitted the holders of the bonds to fund them at 26-66-100 cents on the dollar—this being the amount, principal and interest, that the State had received for them. Under this law nearly all the bonds came in. The holders of most of them chose to accept what the Legislature was willing to give, rather than hold a claim for a larger amount the validity of which was disputed. But the purchasers of the bonds which MCALLISTER & STEBBINS had hypothecated refused to accede to the terms offered. They said, "We are innocent holders of this paper. We bought it as a part of the public debt of the State of Illinois, openly at public auction. We neither knew nor suspected that it did not represent a just and honest debt. We paid for it much more than you offer us, and we will not submit to the shave. We cannot sue you as we would an individual or corporation; but we will wait your prosperity and your returning sense of justice." That was the language that they have invariably used. In 1857 another funding law was passed, which has been construed by GOV. BISSELL to cover the McAllister & Stebbins bonds, as well as various other forms of the State's indebtedness; and he, as the Executive, being made the judge of the validity of the obligations outstanding, decided upon the case that was presented to him that these particular bonds—hypothecated and sold as we have described—were just and honorable, and ought to be paid.

Convinced of the moral and legal obligation of the State to pay these particular bonds, he permitted the transfer agent at New-York to fund them as other bonds were funded. This permission was exercised, and all the bonds of the McAllister & Stebbins issue in the hands of innocent purchasers—$120,000 in all—were surrendered, and new bonds issued. This coming to the ears of the Auditor and Treasurer made at once a serious disagreement in the Executive Council's. To give his Administration the unity which it should have, the Governor recalled his perm
